'SAME OLD DINNERS, SAME OLD DANCES'

—Mrs. Fish.

NEWPORT, July 27.—Mrs. Stuyvesant Fish handed out a social solar plexus today which has stirred the Summer colony from end to end.

She made a blunt speech without notes. The front porch of the Casino was her rostrum and many of the leading residents of the fashionable colony made up her audience. She declared that she and her husband are through with Newport.

Here is a stenographic transcript of her utterances, which promise to go down in the social history of the resort:

I want to tell you all, dear friends, that I'm not fascinated with Newport any more.

Mr. Fish and myself will leave August 17 and may go to Europe.

You see it is this way with us. There are the same old luncheons, the same old dinners, the same old dances; but I can't say the same old faces, though.

There was no handclapping. Mrs. Fish calmly gazed on a semi-circle of astonished faces. Her auditors, after the first pang of surprise, crowded around her and urged her to change her decision and remain the rest of the season.

The recognized social leader was obdurate. She stuck by her edict, and Mr. Fish, who had strolled with her to the Casino at noon, approved his wife's stand.

For weeks gossip has had it that Mr. and Mrs. Fish are discontented with the social whirl here. Mr. Fish did not attempt to keep secret that he had long ago tired of the social routine.

Among those electrified by the speech were Lolla Robinson, Mrs. Herman Oelrichs, Mrs. Pembroke Jones and Mrs. Royal Phelps Carroll. There were many others whose names are conspicuous in society.

The speech of Mrs. Fish, coming from one of her popularity and standing, was a rude shock.

Her going will be a blow to gaiety. In all things worth while Mrs. Fish has for years been the dictator. She has come to be known as the "social pacemaker."

The Fish mansion long has been the centre of the most notable gatherings. Mrs. Fish has entertained royalty often and scores of other dignitaries.

The first intimation of her dissatisfaction with affairs here came when she demanded that her guests stop dancing before midnight one Saturday in order not to desecrate the Sabbath. The surprised merry-makers—or most of them—adjourned to a nearby cottage, where they danced until morning.

10,000 SHOE WORKERS PARADE AT LYNN FOR ST. LOUIS STRIKERS

More than 10,000 members of the various shoe workers' unions of Lynn participated in the largest parade that has ever passed through that city, when they marched from Lynn to Atwood Park, Cliftondale, where a monster field day will be held, the proceeds of which will be given in aid of the striking shoe workers in St. Louis.

It took the marchers just one hour and a half to pass the City Hall, where they were reviewed by Mayor William P. Connery. There were a number of floats in which many young women rode.

This is the first time in the history of shoe organizations in Lynn that the Knights of Labor and members of unions affiliated with the United Shoe Workers of America have co-operated with each other. Each marcher wore a small white button bearing the symbol of the aims of the union workers. The chief marshal of the parade was Stephen M. Walsh. He was assisted by Michael W. Murphy.

PUBLIC BEQUESTS IN STURTEVANT WILL

Three public bequests are listed in the will of Joseph H. Sturtevant of Medford, who died July 4. The will was filed at East Cambridge today. To the Medford Home for Aged Men and Women are left a house and lot at West Adams street, Medford. The Medford Public Library gets the testator's private library. To the Medford Hillside Universalist Church is left $150 for a memorial window.

L WANTS AIKEN AS ARBITER

The Boston Elevated today refused to accept Mayor Fitzgerald as the third member of the board of arbitration which is to act on one points at issue between the Elevated and the striking carmen. The Elevated declared that Chief Justice Aiken of the Superior Court would be desirable on its part to act as the third member of the board.

The special Suffolk Grand Jury which is investigating the Elevated strike was in session today for an hour and fifteen minutes. The jurors had before them six employes of the street railway company. After these were heard the jury adjourned until 9:30 Monday morning.

General William A. Bancroft of the Elevated will be the first witness called. Following him will come the rest of the men not heard today. The Grand Jury investigation will proceed regardless of the settling of the strike.

A mass meeting of the Elevated striking carmen tonight in Faneuil Hall—a meeting of the board of directors of the Elevated on Monday—these are expected to mark the official end of the car strike which has been in progress for seven weeks in this city.

The strikers will vote tonight on the tentative terms of settlement formulated at a conference at the State House yesterday. It is expected they will vote to accept the terms, for the different provisions mark an almost complete victory for the strike cause.

The Elevated directors will vote Monday, and it is believed they will support President Bancroft's agreement.

The strikers have won.

The whole credit for ending the strike was given today to Governor Foss and Mayor Fitzgerald. It was Foss' ultimatum

BETS $5,000 ON WILSON AT EVENS AGAINST FIELD

CHICAGO, July 27.—The first bet of any importance of the coming presidential election was recorded when William Patch of the firm of Balkwell & Patch, furniture dealers, posted $5,000 to bet on Governor Wilson at even money. Mr. Patch's only stipulation is that Governor Wilson must live and run for the Presidency. Bruce Miller, a local sporting man, took $1,500 of the $5,000 and promised Patch that he would take $500 more tomorrow.

"I will bet any amount up to $10,000," said Mr. Patch, "that Wilson is the next President of the United States, and my money will still go on Wilson whether Roosevelt runs independently or not. I have been wagering on Presidential elections for the last twenty years, and I have yet to pick a loser, and in this instance I feel as though I already have the money in my pocket."

Mr. Patch is not a professional betting man and seldom wagers on anything but elections.

CHURCH CRITICISM STIRS THE GIDEONS

ATLANTA, Ga., July 27.—Criticism of Methodists as being "narrow-minded" and "unwilling to help" in the work of Gideons, a national organization of travelling salesmen, caused a heated clash in the opening session of the National convention. M. P. Ashbrook, of Ohio, made statements which brought a score or more of the delegates to their feet in protest. An Atlanta delegate pointed out that Bishop Candler of this city had helped the organization in a time of dire distress. The question was then referred to a committee of five.

EMPEROR OF JAPAN, CONSCIOUS, GREETS SON, THEN RELAPSES

TOKIO, July 27.—Emperor Mutsuhito has recovered consciousness long enough to recognize and greet Crown Prince Yoshihito. He then lapsed into a state of coma. The Crown Prince left the sick room in tears, but stayed in one of the palace rooms near by, believing that any moment he might be called to bid a last farewell to his dying father. After a consultation between Dr. Miura and Aoyoma it was announced that the Mikado's temperature had again risen to 102 and that he was somewhat weaker. Dr. Miura flatly contradicted the report that the Mikado was suffering from typhoid fever, but the report nevertheless continued. General services of prayer for the recovery of the stricken monarch were resumed today throughout the Empire.

SNODGRASS GIRL NOT ON BOARD LINER LINCOLN

LONDON, July 27.—By wireless from the steamship President Lincoln, the purser, in response to inquiries by the AMERICAN, said:

"Dr. Norman Smith is aboard the ship and is not accompanied by his wife. Miss Dorcas Snodgrass is not aboard."

Dr. Norman Smith sent the following message:

"Miss Snodgrass not with me aboard the President Lincoln and I do not know anything about her.

"DR. SMITH."

LIGHTNING HALTS ROYAL DINNER PARTY

BRUSSELS, July 27.—All Belgium today is ringing with praises of the bravery and coolness displayed by the royal family when lightning struck the Chateau Deciergnon, while they were entertaining Prince Henry of Holland at a state dinner last night. In the midst of the dinner there came a blinding flash of lightning followed by a terrific thunder clap and the scores of servants and attendants started to rush wildly about in a panic. King Albert and Queen Elizabeth, with their royal guest, worked among the terrified attendants and finally quieted their fears and restored order.

TEXAS PRIMARY ELECTION ON TODAY

AUSTIN, Tex., July 27.—Texans today are struggling with a five-foot primary election ballot in the State primaries for the nomination of a State and legislative ticket and a preference vote on United States Senators. All the contests are divided on prohibition lines. Jacob Wolters, anti-prohibitionist, and Congressman Morris Shepard, dry, are the candidates for senatorship to succeed Joseph W. Bailey. Governor Colquitts, anti-prohibition, and William Ramsay are the contestants for the governorship.

DON JAIME, SPANISH PRINCE, IS VERY ILL

LONDON, July 27.—Queen Victoria of Spain today received a dispatch from Madrid announcing that her son, Don Jaime, is critically ill. She immediately cancelled plans for her visit to the Isle of Wight and made arrangements to return to Madrid tomorrow.

TWO ARE DEAD IN CANADIAN WRECK

QUEBEC, Que., July 27.—Two passengers are dead and five others seriously injured as the result of a collision between a passenger train and a fast freight on the Intercolonial Railway at Sacre Coeur, near Rimouski. The trains collided in a fog.

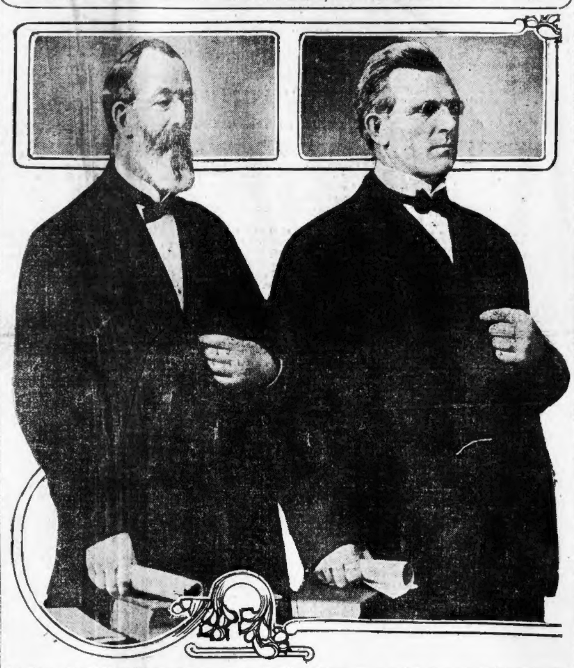
LONDON, July 27.—The Duc de Lorge, a French nobleman, fell down the elevator shaft in a house he was visiting and died a short time later.

Expert Calls Dakota Dan Russell Heir

◆ ◆ ◆

'Unmistakable Family Resemblances'

DAKOTA DAN AND THE LATE DANIEL RUSSELL, PHOTOGRAPHED IN SAME POSE



The above photographs of the late Senator Daniel Russell of Melrose and of Dakota Dan, who claims to be his son, were taken at the Notman Studios on Park street. Twenty years ago Senator Russell had taken the photograph of him. A few days ago Dakota Dan Russell went to the same studio and, under the same light and conditions, was photographed. At the direction of Hermann D. Murphy, the well-known artist, Dakota Dan assumed the same pose as that taken by the late Senator Russell. Mr. Murphy is convinced the photographic experiment shows Dakota Dan is the son of Senator Russell.

Treason! Some One Tore Down Newport Suffragist Flag

NEWPORT, July 27.—Some one tore down the suffragist banner which hung over the entrance of Mrs. O. H. P. Belmont's suffrage headquarters on Franklin street. The local police are on the trail.

The desecration of the "flag" was discovered by Miss Helen Hill, secretary of the local suffragists. When Mrs. Belmont and the other suffragists were informed of the act their indignation knew no bounds.

"The vote for women flag," said Miss Hall, "should be just as sacred as the American flag. Why not?"

The suffragist banner, which is about ten feet in length and several feet in width, and which contains the words "Votes for women," has been replaced. But its position is now several feet higher than before, out of the reach of mischievous "antis."

H. D. Murphy of Harvard Convinced by Novel Photographic Test.

Hermann Dudley Murphy, instructor of drawing at Harvard and one of the leading portrait painters in the country, today declared Dakota Dan, the original claimant for half of the fortune of the late Senator Daniel Blake Russell of Melrose, is in his opinion, the long lost son and legal heir.

Mr. Murphy, who is a recognized physiognomical authority reached this conclusion after a most careful and pains

LONDON, July 27.—Dr. Ethel Smith, the suffragette leader who was yesterday acquitted of complicity in the attempt to burn the country house of Lewis Harcourt, today took action against the police for unlawful imprisonment.

B. & M. Saugus Train Will Stop Any Time: See What Happened

The whirl of modern life hasn't struck the Saugus Branch of the Boston & Maine Railroad as shown when a cow stopped an in-bound morning train to Boston, and later the same train was halted for the second time while the engineer of a local ahead accommodatingly held up his train to wait for two belated women passengers. The cow calmly grazed at a few stubs of grass in the middle of the track and swished her tail in contentment. After some effort the intruder was ejected from the premises.

A second sudden stop of the train soon followed as it started to leave the Everett Station. The cause proved to be two belated women passengers, laden with babies in their arms, for whom the accommodating engineer stopped his train and waited a minute.

ANDREW WHIPPLE KILLED IN CRASH

NORTH ADAMS, July 27.—One man was killed and two persons were seriously injured early today when an automobile in which they were crossing a bridge that spans the Hoosick Brook plunged down an embankment. The man killed was:

ANDREW WHIPPLE, of Boston.

The injured: Mr. and Mrs. Brownell Bates of North Powall, Vt.

Mr. Bates is not expected to live. The chances for the recovery of Mrs. Bates are slight.

Survivors Found Unconscious.

The cause of the accident or the time it occurred are both unknown. Mr. and Mrs. Bates, lying unconscious on the side of the embankment, were discovered by Robert Stevens of Hoosick, N. Y., just across the line from this city, as he was crossing the bridge today on his way to work.

The body of Whipple was later fished out from the brook.

Whipple had been spending his vacation at North Powall, Vermont, where he lived, and on the day previous had gone on an auto trip with Mr. and Mrs. Bates. Bates is a rural free delivery carrier and has the auto to take out parties.

Plunges Over Embankment.

They left Troy, N. Y., about 10 o'clock at night. Bates was driving the car. It is believed that he became sleepy and was not on his guard as he came down Potter's hill, leading to the bridge. It is believed that he was thrown as the car went over the embankment, Whipple catapulting over his head.

Their cries could not be heard. Whipple's body lay half submerged in the water. Mr. and Mrs. Bates were half-way up the embankment.

When Stevens saw them he ran down the slope, drew the body of Whipple from the water. He saw the man was dead. He then did what he could for the man and woman.

With help he carried Mr. and Mrs. Bates to the home of A. D. Beers nearby.

QUINCY GIRL HURT AS AUTO LEAPS BANK NEAR BRANT ROCK

BRANT ROCK, July 27.—Miss Mildred Thayer of Quincy and Miss Louise Swift were injured when the auto in which they were riding plunged down a fifteen-foot embankment at a place where a culvert is being built under the Mansfield dyke, half-way between Mansfield and Brant Rock. Miss Thayer's collar bone and three ribs were broken. Miss Swift was painfully bruised. The driver, a young man named Howland, was badly shaken up.

At the place where the culvert is being built there is a temporary fence as a guard against falling into the excavation. Vehicles are obliged to turn sharply to the left and pass through a narrow opening. Howland did not see this and plunged through the fence.

KILLED AS ROYAL SALUTE IS FIRED

PARIS, July 27.—A dispatch from Berlin today states it has just been divulged that during the recent interview between the Emperor of Russia and the King of Sweden a blank shell burst on the Swedish royal yacht as a salute was being fired, killing one sailor and injuring four others.

AVIATORS KILLED IN PLUNGE AT MUNICH

MUNICH, July 27.—Aviator Fischer and his mechanic, Karl Johnson, were instantly killed here today when their aeroplane crashed to the ground from a height of 500 feet. Fischer and his aid had made several circuits over the flying field and the aeroplane apparently was working perfectly when the death plunge came.

WHAT'S THE MATTER WITH NEWPORT

Will be answered in a surprising manner by one of the noted social leaders of the Summer colony

IN TOMORROW'S SUNDAY AMERICAN

GRAY ELUDES MAINE POSSE

CARMEL, Me., July 27.—The hunt for Jasper Sherman Gray, the farmhand, for whom orders have been issued to capture, "dead or alive," as the alleged murderer of pretty fourteen-year-old Naomi Mitchell of North Carmel, settled down today into a struggle of woodsmen against woodsman. For Gray, degenerate and feeble-minded as he is declared to be, is an expert woodsman. How benumbed his wits may be on other matters, in the woods he is thoroughly at home. He knows every bypath the country round, and the posses on his trail are wide awake to the fact that they must bend their every energy to capture their man. The bloodhounds from Thomaston arrived early today and were at once put on the trail.

It is believed that the fugitive is in the woods not far from the scene of the crime. To surround him would seem an easy matter, but to one versed in the life of the forest, there are many ways to elude the watchful eyes of the searchers. The woods on the north extend as far as Canada.

The country about North Carmel is sparsely settled with scattered farms, pastures, wood lots and swamps, intersected with cross road.

Gray is familiar with the ground, often spending days wandering about, and no doubt knows as many hiding places as the foxes which raid the farmyards.

Gray was seen for the first time since he left Mason's store at North Carmel and followed the girl up the road toward her home, by Edgar Robinson. He came out of the woods near the Call farm on the Hampden road, a mile and a half from Carmel village. He stood in the road for a minute or two and then, seeing Robinson, disappeared.

Robinson knows him well and is positive of his identification. Gray had on the same straw hat, blue overalls and rubber boots he wore the night of the murder.

Bert Brown and Irving Call, who live nearby, at once started into the woods after the fugitive, taking their rifles with them. Deputy Sheriff Packard arrived soon afterwards, in response to a telephone message, and joined in the search.

Two other young men reported seeing Gray on the Hampden road. The woods where he was seen are southeast of Carmel village and three miles in the rear of the house of Frank Stevens, his stepfather. An old logging road runs through the woods and there is a lumber camp some distance in. This was searched, but no trace of Gray was found there.

It is believed that Gray has been without food, save for what berries he may have found in the woods, since Wednesday night, and that hunger will soon force him to make an attempt to get food. He is still armed with the sharp knife he spent much of Wednesday afternoon in grinding, and many of those who know him believe he will never be taken alive.

The slain girl's father is bitter. Standing on the stoop of his humble home on Pomeroy road and unmindful of the country folks who arrived in droves in mud-bespattered vehicles to tender their sympathy, he gave vent to his feelings.

"I would give ten years—the rest of my life, to lay my hands on the throat of the villain who murdered my daughter and may yet be the cause of the death of my sick wife," he said, in passion-broken voice.

ROXBURY BOY IS ACCIDENTALLY SHOT BY YOUNGER BROTHER

George M. Brown, aged eighteen, of No. 6 Willow park, Roxbury, was accidentally shot by his fourteen-year-old brother Walter at their home. George is at the City Hospital in a critical condition. A 22-calibre bullet is imbedded near his right eye. The doctors will try to locate it with the X-ray.

Walter was taken to the Roxbury Crossing police station. He and the wounded brother tell the same story.

"We were both playing in the bathroom," sobbed Walter. "George had the pistol in his hip pocket. When he turned his back I took it out and it accidentally went off just as he turned." The boys are colored.

STRIKERS TO MEET TONIGHT

that brought an end to the bickerings of the Elevated officials.

There had been conferences and counter-conferences and messages and offers and refusals. Finally the Governor met the Elevated men in his office. He stood beside his desk, facing them, his heavy chin protruding in characteristic fashion. He said:

> Gentlemen, I have as much at stake as any of you.
> But the men are right.
> You must give way.

The Elevated did give way, and the men won.

Here are the terms under which the strike is expected to end:

1. The Boston Elevated railroad agrees not to discriminate either for or against any labor organization or union. In other words the Elevated recognizes the union and will run "the open shop."

2. That in all cases of discipline a committee consisting of one man appointed by the employees and one appointed by the Elevated officials shall decide on the question of fact. If these two shall not agree, the Mayor will act as a third member of the committee. This will affect all cases except the failure to register fares. Punishment for offences after the question of fact has been decided, is left to the Elevated officials.

3. The question of reinstating men in their old positions with privileges of taking their old runs and wearing their stripes is left to be decided in each case by the State Board of Arbitration.

The question of the standing of the road's "loyal" employes is one of the difficulties yet to be solved in connection with the strike. These men have stuck at their posts, and in many cases their standing has been advanced, when they filled the places left vacant by the strikers. It might be expected they would protest vigorously against the reinstatement of the strikers ahead of them.

Loyal Men Endorse Road.

However, General Bancroft announced that the loyal men had voted to leave the question of settlement entirely in the hands of the road and to accept any settlement reached. However, a petition signed by some of these men states that the "loyal" employes "demand to know if the men who have been loyal to the company and submitted to insults from strikers and the public while performing their duty are to be superceded by the so-called strikers." The petition goes on to state that "it is degrading to humanity that the so-called strikers should be placed ahead of them after they have so loyally earned their places by loyalty to the company."

Mayor Fitzgerald has done the hardest kind of work toward settling the strike. And when the agreement was reached, he was the best pleased man at the State House. He walked out of the conference room and after saying, "Well, boys, it is all over," handed the reporters the following statement from the Governor:

OFFER OF MILL MEN RENEWED IN NEW BEDFORD

NEW BEDFORD, July 27.—William D. Devoll, secretary of the Manufacturers' Association, today issued a statement reiterating the manufacturers' proposal made two weeks ago to deal with the strikers if they could suggest any better method of classifying cloth than the grading system now in vogue.

The strike has now been on two weeks. Fifteen thousand operatives are out. It has cost the strikers about $200,000, and the manufacturers about $100,000.

The statement reads:

"The New Bedford Manufacturers' Association reiterates its offer of July 5 made to the weavers to confer with them if they could suggest any better method of classifying cloth than the grading system.

"Any charge made of unjust fining is a reflection against the honesty and manhood of the overseers of weaving. There is no justice in paying to the careless or indifferent weavers who do not stop their looms as much as the good weavers who are careful and quick to rectify any imperfection in the cloth. The majority of the weavers produce first-quality cloth. They are never paid second-quality prices and have no real objection to the grading system. Let those who object to the grading system seek employment elsewhere.

"Referring to Secretary Duffy's charge to the effect that short staples are used in the New Bedford mills, I would state that no mills are running less than 1⅛ to 1½-inch staples.

"In regard to the charges of excessive finings at the Dartmouth mills, the finings are nothing like $500 and $600, as alleged by Secretary Duffy. If the largest number of second quality prices were charged to the weavers, it would not equal half this sum, and the records for the last two weeks in which the grading system was employed shows that the amount of fines at this mill to be $20.06 and $16.54. The largest loss to the individual weaver is $1.27 and $1.14."

STORK PAYS VISIT TO GRANT FAMILY

Lady Constance in "Salome"

* * *

Titled Dancer Coming Here

LONDON, July 27.—Lady Constance Stewart Richardson, daughter of the Earl of Cromartie and kin to many a noble house of England and Scotland, is to dance the Salome on Broadway, New York.

This latest plan of the accomplished, but unconventional young woman is not a plan to aid charity. She sails in a few weeks to appear as Salome as a strict professional in the production which is staged by Reinhardt, the great German producer, and which will be offered to the American public at the Victoria Theatre.

New York society has not yet forgotten the surprising appearance of Lady Constance a few years ago in the fashionable entertainments given for charity. Her daring dances in scanty and filmy garments sent gasps through even the worldly wise audiences whom she entertained.

HEADLESS BODY CASE IN COURT

WOONSOCKET, R. I., July 27.—The hearing in the headless murder mystery, in which Henry Deslouver, a mill hand, is charged with killing Mrs. Angelie Parmentier, opened here today before Judge Charles H. McFee.

A large array of witnesses appeared to testify, including Medical Examiner Reid, Assistant Medical Examiner Edward L. Myers, Eugene Jacobs, who discovered the body, James Brady, who towed it ashore, and Chief of Police Lowell J. Boston.

Base Fight on Identity.

Attorneys Archambeault and Jalbert, who are conducting the defence, are basing their fight for their client on the question of identity. They maintain that the headless body was not that of Mrs. Parmentier.

City Solicitor France said in opening the case that it was the most important that has ever been called in Woonsocket.

"We feel," he declared, "that we shall prove a strong chain of circumstances that will require an explanation from the defendant. I feel confident that at the conclusion there will be no doubt of the fact that this man is guilty."

Chief of Police Boston, the first witness called by the prosecution, identified the warrant by which Deslouver had been arrested and he identified the prisoner. He testified as follows:

Chief Tells Story.

"About June 25 a Mr. Jewell of the pumping station telephoned me that a body had been found in the river near Dame's Crossing. I went there and saw a body in the water. It was headless. I also saw that the hands were tied with ropes. The ropes were imbedded in the flesh.

"The body was taken in charge under my direction by Officer Brady and Mr. Jacobs, who towed it down stream about two hundred feet to a landing place. There was a stone weighing seventy-five pounds attached to the body. We brought the body ashore. The medical examiner performed the autopsy, after which I went away.

"I later obtained a list of missing women. Among them was the Parmentier woman.

"I viewed the body later in the cemetery and noted several marks on it."

HOLD NEW MAN IN N. Y. KILLING

NEW YORK, July 27.—Jack Sullivan, alias Jacob A. Reich, was arraigned before Coroner Feinberg, sitting as a magistrate today on the charge of complicity in the murder of Herman Rosenthal. He was held and was committed to the Tombs without bail.

Threats by the allies of the gamblers and gangsters under arrest for complicity in the murder of Rosenthal caused careful precautions to be taken today to prevent the assassination, intimidation or spiriting away of Louis Kreise, an important new witness who identified "Bridgy" Webber and Sullivan as two of the men who stood in front of the Hotel Metropole when Rosenthal was shot. Two detectives guard Kreise today.

District Attorney Whitman said today: "There is but one issue and I have but one concern in this matter. Herman Rosenthal, as he himself had announced publicly, was to have come to my house with his wife Tuesday morning to supply me with evidence of a corrupt alliance between the police and the lawbreakers in this city.

"Murderers at Large."

"He was butchered in the most brilliantly lighted street in New York, because, as I believe, he was coming to see me. He was shot down by four or more murderers in a block literally swarming with policeman. Nothwithstanding their presence, there was not the semblance of an effort to apprehend the murderers and the pretext of a pursuit is so silly and transparent that it ought not to deceive a ten-year-old child. Nearly two weeks have elapsed and the actual murderers, in my opinion, are at large. Any further comment seems superflous."

To find Sam Schepps is the chief endeavor today of District Attorney Whitman, the New York police, and the authorities of every city in the nation. For that man, says the District Attorney, is the key to the mystery that still surrounds the slaying of the gambler.

The District Attorney's statement indicated that Schepps, in his opinion, is the man who actually fired the fatal shots.

Webber Held Without Bail.

Kreise told his story before Coroner Feinberg at the latter's examination of Webber, and as a result Webber was committed to the Tombs.

Kreise declared that the street was cleared in preparation for the assassination by a band of forty men; he told how he was ordered to move on by one of the gangsters, when he stopped to see what a group of four or five men was doing in the middle of the street. These men, he said, went to the entrance of the Metropole at a signal from a man in the doorway.

Immediately thereafter the shots which killed Rosenthal were fired, and the same four or five men hurried to the waiting automobile and disappeared.

"Did you see any one standing in this group of men who is now in the court room?" asked District Attorney Whitman of the witness. "Yes, there he is!" and Kreise's long forefinger pointed straight at the face of Bridgy Webber. The scene was dramatic in its intensity, and for a moment not even the court officials spoke. Sensation followed sensation when Kreise identified Jack Sullivan, and Coroner Feinberg ordered Sullivan's arrest.

Mayor Gaynor has written to Police Commissioner Waldo a 2,000-word letter, in which he orders the commissioner not to suspend Lieutenant Becker except on evidence strong enough to convict. In this letter the Mayor says:

"This is the third attempt of hunted gamblers and other criminals to break down the police administration inside of two years, through their paid press agents. Do not suspend Lieutenant Becker and put him on trial without evidence to justify his conviction and dismissal. Do not bend a single bit to clamor, and especially to clamor created by the hired press agents of the gamblers with whom you are at war.

Helen Taft Guest At Dinner Dance Of Essex County Club

MANCHESTER-BY-THE-SEA, July 27.—Miss Helen Taft and Robert Taft were guests of Mrs. William F. Draper at the dinner-dance at the Essex County Club. It was the most brilliant society event of the season on the North Shore and many of the legation set were present.

Others at Mrs. Draper's table, which filled the little library of the clubhouse, were Miss Margaret Preston Draper, Edward Fitz, Miss Sophy Johnston, George Harrison, Mr. and Mrs. S. D. Warren, Lieut. Lay, Miss Eleanor Reyburn, Mrs. S. V. R. Thayer, Jr., and Frederick Ayer.

Others entertaining were: Charles E. Cotting, Jr., of Boston, who had a party of thirty young people; Mrs. J. Harrington Walker of Detroit, Mrs. Washington B. Thomas of Boston, George H. Lyman of Boston, Mrs. Frank P. Mitchell of Washington, Mrs. Thomas McKee of Pittsburgh, Mrs. William A. Tucker of Boston, Miss Mabel T. Boardman of Washington, Mrs. R. L. Fryer, Mrs. J. K. H. Kampmann of San Antonio, Tex., Mrs. George E. Warren of Boston, Mrs. Arthur Doane Cook of Boston, Mrs. Prescott Bigelow of Boston, Mrs. J. B. Waller, Mrs. J. C. Barr of Boston, Mrs. John W. Blodgett and Mrs. W. H. Coolidge of Newton.

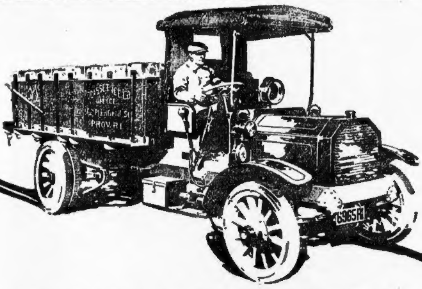
Ten thousand Lynn shoe workers will attend the outing today at Atwood Park, under the auspices of the labor unions of the trade. A parade will precede the outing.



PEERLESS TRUCKS

Open New Avenues to Profit

Three two-horse teams and two men were replaced by this 4-ton Peerless Truck in making supply-deliveries from ice-factory to distributing wagons over a three mile route. In this service the Truck averages forty miles a day with capacity-loads. Time-economy has resulted in a notable reduction of ice-shrinkage.

When not employed in this special field, the Truck is kept busy in contract work of a miscellaneous character, and has made as high as a hundred miles a day—a distance entirely beyond the range of horse-teams.

4,500 Tech Grads Bay State Men; 2,200 in Boston

Over 4,500 of the 10,000 living graduates of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology are now living in the New England States, according to statistics compiled and published in the "Register of Former Students," which lists ninety per cent. of the graduates.

Boston alone has 2,200, or over one-fifth. Other cities of the Commonwealth have 1,800. Thus Massachusetts is far ahead of any other State with about 4,000 graduates of her famous technical institute.

New York State has 1,360 graduates, and New York City has 800 of these. Among other States with a big list are Pennsylvania with 473, Ohio with 325, and Illinois 438. The ten Southern States have 325 graduates among them. There are five DuPonts from Wilmington, Delaware.

Oyster Bay has a single graduate.

WARMAN DENIES MORSE REPORT

The report of a deal between the Grand Trunk Railroad officials and Charles W. Morse for steamship connections is vigorously denied by Cy Warman, assistant general manager of the Grand Trunk. Mr. Warman said:

"Relative to the recent newspaper stories of an alleged understanding between Grand Trunk representatives and C. W. Morse, looking to an extension of the Grand Trunk's steamship service through his activities, it can be stated that there is absolutely no foundation in fact for these rumors.

GRAY HAIR

Good News! Your Hair Can Be Darkened and Kept So

NO COMMON DYES

FREE DOLLAR BOX

Gray hair is believed by most people to be evidence of weakening in physical and mental power. They think the loss of vitality in the hair proves a general failing in the strength of the head.

Those who have gray hair and who must rely upon employers or others are often compelled to fight this prejudice. It is particularly hard for the man with gray hair who has been thrown upon his own resources by business failure or mercantile changes and who must seek a new position.

Gray Haired People Not Wanted

The gray-haired person soon realizes that younger looking men are chosen for positions, although he may know some thus selected who are really older than he is.

Among women, the one who possesses hair of the natural dark or dark-brown shade (rather than gray, white or bleached) meets with the highest favor.

As a matter of fact, gray hair has nothing whatever to do with loss of physical or mental vitality. It is caused by a disorder of the pigmentary glands in the hair follicles, due to such causes as a shock, fever, wearing of heavy hats, neglect in caring for the hair, etc.

Dangerous, Nasty Dyes

Only those can afford gray hair who are independent. All others ought to take the necessary means to restore the natural shade of the hair.

Herein is where most gray-haired persons make the mistake of using what are commonly known as hair stains, dyes, dyeing combs, etc. It would be quite as sensible to use ink or stove polish. These dyes deceive nobody except those who use them. The color is unnatural and everybody easily knows what has been done. The hair has been merely painted. These dyes soon begin to wash off, usually discoloring the skin, clothing, pillows, etc., and ugly streaks of strange shades cover the hair. The sight becomes ludicrous to most observers, but pathetic to those who sympathize with the person who has felt it necessary to adopt such makeshifts.

Complete Restoration of Color

We have been studying the problem for years, and at last a Treatment has been evolved which has its object not merely in restoring the hair to its natural shade of youthful days, but in developing a luxuriant, silky, strong and otherwise beautiful growth.

The hair roots and glands are reached, and the best possible results are attained. The hair does not change its color in a few hours as is the case with the common, ink-like dyes which not only make the hair appear ridiculous, but seriously damage it and hasten baldness. On the contrary, this new Method causes the hair to darken gradually so that the appearance is that of improving health and vigor.

Book and Dollar Box Free

Once the true dark shade is attained, it is practically permanent, inasmuch as only occasional further slight applications should keep the hair in perfect condition up to the eighty-fifth year of age.

The cost of the new Method is very small and as compared with the expense of frequently purchasing commonly advertised dyes, it is much cheaper. It is obtainable only from Koskott Laboratory. A large, illustrated, very interesting book which tells how to improve and preserve the hair will be sent absolutely free. No other book has ever told what you can learn by reading this; it has information about restoring the hair to natural color, overcoming baldness, complete and lasting removal of dandruff, how to stop hair from falling out, etc.

This treatise is of value to men and women of all ages and gives information never before published. It will be sent postpaid in plain wrapper, with a dollar size box of Koskott No. 1, to you, if you return Coupon below; enclose only ten cents in stamps or silver to cover part advertising and mailing cost. If you do not candidly admit it is most wonderful value, we will promptly return your stamps.

By answering this advertisement therefore, you cannot lose a cent. Do not delay, save your hair, grow new hair and restore the color. Address: KOSKOTT LABORATORY, 1269 Broadway, C 327, New York, N. Y.

ACTOR OLCOTT IN LIFE DRAMA

NEW YORK, July 27.—Chauncey Olcott has filed suit for annulment of his marriage to his first wife, Mrs. Cora E. James-Striker-Moran-Olcott. He married her in 1888 and divorced her in 1893. In 1897 he married Miss Margaret O'Donovan, who is still living with him.

The case will come up before Justice Howard in the Supreme Court in Albany today.

The suit discloses a matrimonial tangle which is likely to occupy the attention of the courts a long time and which involves titles to much valuable property.

As Cora James, the first Mrs. Olcott was a show girl. Joseph L. Striker, a New Yorker, married her in 1883, and they went for their honeymoon to his Newport home. There in June he was drowned, leaving his wife-widow about $150,000.

Second Union Ended Soon.

In March, 1884, Mrs. Striker married Isaac C. Moran of New York. The marriage took place in Baltimore. Moran, who died last Winter, was a brother-in-law of E. D. Morgan, banker. The couple lived together only a few weeks. Then Mrs. Striker-Moran returned to the stage.

Moran in September, 1887, went to Nebraska and got a divorce. Olcott contends that this divorce is illegal in that the Nebraska courts had no jurisdiction.

In his complaint the actor tells how he divorced Mrs. Striker-Moran-Olcott on the statutory grounds, and how four years later he wedded Miss O'Donovan in Salem, Mass.

Now, Olcott says, his first wife is trying to have his divorce set aside on the ground of fraud. His complaint recites that after threats by her he had the Nebraska court records examined, and then learned for the first time that she had never been legally divorced from Moran, and consequently the Moran marriage was in force when Olcott married her.

Often Starving, She Said.

In her answering affidavit Mrs. Cora Olcott says Olcott up to two years ago paid $5 a week. Then he stopped this allowance and since, she says, she has lived on charity, often being without food. Olcott, she says, has much valuable property and an income of $40,000 a year.

Moran, after his divorce, married. He died last January in New Haven, leaving a widow and two children and considerable property. Should Olcott obtain an annulment, Mrs. Cora Olcott would legally be Moran's widow, and the widow and children in New Haven would be without standing.

If the first Mrs. Olcott's motion to set aside the divorce should prevail, any transfers of property made by Olcott since that time would carry with them the right of dower for her.

PASTOR REPLIES TO HELEN GOULD

GRAND JUNCTION, Colo., July 27.—Advising her to "go to work as a waitress, shopgirl, anything so that she lives on less than $10 a week," and suggesting that she "seek a husband in the backwoods," the Rev. Elmer Huffner has replied to Miss Helen Gould's letter criticising his remarks on old maids.

Mr. Huffner, in a sermon delivered in the First Christian Church, declared that old maids should be isolated on a barren island as a waste product. Miss Gould wrote, as the richest bachelor maid in America, declaring her belief that "such people as myself are not hindering the progress of civilization, but advancing it."

"Miss Gould is a noble woman," was Mr. Huffner's comment, "but her nobleness would be greatly enhanced were she married. I don't attempt to dictate to Miss Gould what she should or should not do.

"Miss Gould has done more good for humanity than any other bachelor girl in this age and she can still do unlimited good. But no woman has done her duty to the world until she has borne children.

Miss Gould is in a peculiar position because of her riches. She cannot be sure she is being wooed for love alone. The only way to solve this problem is for Miss Gould to accept a position in the backwoods incognito.

Here she might find the right one, a righteous, industrious man, who would love her for her true self and not for wealth.

Her riches have handicapped her in the real enjoyment of life, and, I dare say, she is not as happy in her private car with her maids as is my servant girl.

If Miss Gould wants two weeks of real enjoyment, two weeks of real happiness, let her disguise herself as a waitress and seek work in a cheap restaurant.

Let her clerk in a store or work as a chambermaid, anything so long as she earns her own living and lives on less than $10 a week.

Old Captain Was Ruptured

If this should meet the eye of any person who is ruptured, let him or her write Capt. W. A. Collings, 248 D, Arsenal St., Watertown, N. Y., and get the book which tells of the Captain's experiences. He was for many years a sufferer (double rupture) and had become bed-ridden, yet he luckily found something that cured his hernia completely and gave him better health, with a prolonged life. The book describes how this was done, and legions of others have followed the information with the grand result of curing their own ruptures quickly and easily. A post card will bring the book and a box of the remedies, which will be given free to any one who applies. Better cut out this notice, as it may not be printed again. Those who are wearing torturing trusses, plasters, etc., will be gratified in this genuine chance of getting a genuine, speedy, inexpensive cure.

'No Such Thing Today as an Old Maid'

Miss Watkins, Spinster, Flays Pastor

Boston Woman Replies to Minister Who Criticized Miss Helen Gould.

By SYBIL WARNE.

If the Rev. Elmer F. Huffner of Grand Junction, Col., the learned divine who says that old maids should be exiled to a barren island as waste humanity, ever comes East I hope he will stop off at Boston, if only to see Miss Florence E. Watkins—spinster.

I can assure the Rev. Elmer F. Huffner a warm reception. Incidentally, it is quite likely that his views on the old maid question will undergo a radical change, if they have not already done so under the written lashing given him by Miss Helen Gould.

Miss Watkins is a spinster—but she is not an old maid. At least she denies it. In appearance she is far from old-maidish. Mentally, she is the antithesis of the popular conception of an old maid.

Miss Watkins is a business woman. She has an office in a Tremont street office building. She is a graduate of Simmons College.

"Rubbish," snorted Miss Watkins, when I asked for her opinion of Rev. Mr. Huffner's statement concerning the disposition of old maids. "Why, I don't believe Mr. Huffner has ever seen an old maid—I mean the modern kind. His notions concerning the old maid were probably obtained from some book which dealt with the period in which our grandparents lived, in which was depicted an old maid—cat on lap—gently rocking herself to sleep."

"As a matter of fact," went on Miss Watkins, "there is no such thing as an old maid today. There are plenty of unmarried women of thirty and forty—more, in fact, than there ever were. But why call them old?

Not Old at Forty.

"Nowadays, a person at thirty or forty is not old. On the contrary, they are just reaching the prime of their usefulness to themselves and to the community. They have just passed the stage of youth and are beginning to ripen into full maturity.

"The attitude towards spinsters has undergone a vast change in the past two generations. And the statement of Mr. Huffner seems strange in the present state of enlightenment. His attitude is the expression of that unprogressive type of men who refuse to accept the new order of things and persist in clinging to the old.

"The day when woman's sole occupation was the rearing of children has passed. Of course, there is no gainsaying the fact that if woman's purpose in the world was solely this that the spinster would be entirely useless, and the banishment as waste humanity suggested by Mr. Huffner would seem quite fitting.

"But woman's sphere has been enlarged in the last two generations. She has swept into business. She has found occupation in lines of endeavor which were occupied formerly by man exclusively. There are now few fields in which woman has not penetrated. She is proving her usefulness in hundreds of occupations.

FLORENCE E. WATKINS

Person at Thirty or Forty Nowadays Are Just at Prime of Life.

"Why, then, can't the woman of independent spirit who prefers to rely on her own resources rather than on a husband, who either has no desire for matrimony or is unable to find her ideal mate, remain in a state of single-blessedness?

"That the world realizes this fact is evidenced by the change in the general attitude towards the spinster. In our grandparents' time every woman looked forward to matrimony as the culmination of her career. Then it was more or less of a disgrace to remain unmarried. The only women who remained spinsters were those who were unable to obtain husbands.

"But the old maid of today is of an entirely different character. You find her occupying important positions in every walk of life. You find her on the same footing as man and making almost as much money. She is brainy, self-reliant, alert.

"During the Civil War times an old maid was easily distinguished from her married sister. In a crowd can one pick out an old maid today?"

MUST GIVE AWAY HER BABY GIRL

They heard it and wondered,
Though nobody knew
Just what 'twas that sundered
Your mother and you.
'Twas DEEPER than feeling—
With you she must part—
So her suff'ring concealing
SHE broke her poor heart.
None knew of the sorrow
Before you were born,
When we looked for each morrow
In tears and forlorn.
So dear little baby,
We give you away,
And our hearts we sent with you—
Forever and aye.
—From an old poem.

Mrs. Oscar Le Vasseur, a Lynn mother eighteen years old, lying on a cot in the maternity ward of the Lynn City Hospital today, with her six-day-old infant cuddled in her right arm, told an AMERICAN reporter that she wants to give the child away.

"Oh, I am not wanting to give baby—I think I shall name the sweet little thing Violet—I am not wanting to give her away just to be parting with her," said the mother with a wan smile. "Oh, no. Neither I nor my husband, Oscar, want to do that. But, oh, there's a good reason, and I'm afraid you won't understand. You see it is because we don't want baby to suffer. We want her to grow up and have a good training and education.

"Things have gone so hard with my husband and me. He has been out of work so long. Just as soon as I can get out of the hospital, and a good family has taken baby, I shall try to get a job myself."

It was pathetic as the mother told it. The visit of the reporter to the maternity ward of the hospital followed a letter sent to the editor of the AMERICAN. This is the letter:

Editor AMERICAN.

My wife has just given birth to a girl and, as at the age of eighteen she already has a boy eleven and a half months old, we'd like to give the newly born to some refined people. The girl is very fat and pretty with big blue eyes and long light hair. We are both American born of French descent.

If you are interested, answer at once by letter as the child must be taken before August 5.

OSCAR LE VASSEUR,
No. 11 Chestnut avenue, Lynn, Mass.

When the reporter called at the hospital, the mother had just heard from her husband that he had secured a job in a shoe factory.

"Oh, I am so glad," she exclaimed. Then a look of pain crossed her face. She had looked down at the baby cooing away.

"Dear, sweet little thing," she went on caressingly speaking to the child. "Mamma doesn't want to part with you. But mamma may have to do it. Mamma must think of it though it makes her heart sore.

"I think I will call you Violet, dear. Don't you think Violet is a pretty name?" the young mother asked of the reporter.

He DID think so, indeed.

"I do, too," she added. "Really, it's awfully hard to think of giving baby away. But I would rather have her brought up right, as she should be, than to be sickly or in need of nourishment.

"I couldn't think of giving Violet away unless we found the right kind of a family that would take her. I would always want to know that she was in a good kind family, and would always be loved and well cared for."

MRS. OSCAR LEVASSEUR.

DEWEY ACTS AS MANLEY COUNSEL

Former Judge Henry S. Dewey, though confined at Pierce Farm, is acting as counsel for Annie Manley, the colored plaintiff in the $50,000 breach of promise suit against Professor Phillip D. Marcou of Harvard a motion on which will come up in Suffolk County next Tuesday.

Miss Manley appeared in the Suffolk Superior Court and showed Clerk Bellew a letter written by Judge Dewey giving advice as to how she had better proceed in fighting the motion for the dismissal of her exceptions.

The motion was filed severald ays ago by Professor Marcou's counsel. Miss Manley asked for a continuance. The court directed her to secure counsel and she said that she would do so.

She told Clerk Bellew that she had been out to see Dudge Dewey and had talked the matter over with him. She stated that she was going to have the exceptions printed.

She showed a letter in which Judge Dewey directed her how to proceed. She was told that as the case came from Middlesex county she should go to that county and take whatever action she desired.

Remove your Freckles

FRECKLES

Don't Hide Them with a Veil; Remove Them with the New Drug.

An eminent skin specialist recently discovered a new drug, othine—double strength—which is so uniformly successful in removing freckles and giving a clear, beautiful complexion that it is sold by any first-class druggist under an absolute guarantee to refund the money if it fails.

Don't hide your freckles under a veil; get an ounce of othine and remove them. Even the first night's use will show a wonderful improvement, some of the lighter freckles vanishing entirely. It is absolutely harmless and cannot injure the most tender skin.

Be sure to ask the druggist for the double strength othine; it is this that is sold on the money-back guarantee.

RILEY'S COLUMN

"UNCLE CY" YOUNG will never play baseball again, according to the Pilgrims, who saw Cy at Pittsburgh on their way home from the Western campaign. Cy himself told them that he would not say whether he expected to "come back" or not. But he did say that he would not return to baseball unless he felt sure that he would be a winner. He said it so reluctantly that the Pilgrims believed he had no confidence that he would be able to "come back."

* * *

CY has an independent fortune now, owns a paying farm, delights in agriculture just as he delighted in baseball, and seemed to be gradually weaning himself away from the national game. They don't play big league baseball at Peoli, O., although Cy dons his uniform once in a while and shows the youngsters how to do it. He can't resist the temptation to get into his togs and "shoot 'em over."

* * *

NOTHING would suit Cy better than to find himself returning to his old-time form, and the hope that springs eternal has not completely deserted the veteran. Baseball has done wonders for him, though, and he has worked like an ox on his farm. He has lost considerable weight. In fact, Cy is lighter than he has been in years. He still has that wonderful arm, but it is a question if he has energy enough behind it to "burn 'em over" fast enough and long enough to keep big league batters away from the plate for nine innings at a time.

* * *

CY went all the way from Peoli to see the Pilgrims play, and declared that they were going faster than they did when he was with the team. He had a long talk with Johnny Kling, his old manager, and Kling put the question up to him as to whether he would play baseball again. Cy shook his head, smiled and said he couldn't tell.

THE Red Sox open their second western campaign in Chicago today, and it ought to be a wild premier after last Saturday's spectacular game at Fenway Park. "Buck" O'Brien is slated to work for the Bostonians. The Sox play four games series with the westerners in this order: Chicago, St. Louis, Detroit, Cleveland. They will reappear at Fenway Park August 14.

* * *

CY swapped some baseball stories, which is a reminder of the best baseball yarn he ever told and one of the best ever related by anybody. Here it is, in Cy's own language:

It was a long time ago, when I was first playing with Cleveland and Pat Tebeau was boss of the job. The regular umpire—we only had one in those days—failed to show up. So, according to custom, one man from each side was chosen to officiate.

The game spun along until the ninth inning and in that session both sides were tied. They weren't hitting me, and we weren't hitting their man. The umpire of the other side was behind the plate and I was pitching. Our umpire was working on the bases.

The game ran into extra innings, and it was growing dark. Finally something happened. I steamed four over the plate—in those days I could 'get 'em over'—and they were all called balls. The fellow behind the plate sent the man to first base. Since there had been no cheating before that, I was surprised, but although I was mad clean through I started pitching to the next fellow.

I gave him some bad ones and some good ones, but they were all called balls and he walked. Then I began to realize that they had it fixed to beat us then and there. We protested, but it did no good. We threatened to walk out of the grounds, but the man behind the plate was umpire-in-chief and he said we'd forfeit the game. So we took a chance on the next batter.

The same thing happened again. I was sure that those balls 'cut' the plate, and the batted didn't even try to stand up to 'em. The batter was passed and the bases were filled.

"We were sore, but we didn't know just what to do. Suddenly Pat Tebeau came over to me, boiling with rage. 'If you pitch another ball, Cy,' he said, 'you'll force in a run and that'll end the game. Let me take the ball!'

"I gave it to him, wondering what he intended to do. Pat walked over to third base, deliberately pushed the man off the bag, tagged him and our umpire yelled 'Out'! Then he ran to second, and the man there was pushed away after a clinch, while Pat tagged him and our man sung 'Out'! again. By this time the other bunch were as mad as we were and when Pat ran to first to repeat the job there, it looked like a fight. But Pat was husky, pushed his man away and tagged him.

"'Out! Game called on account of darkness,' yelled our umpire, and we all ran off the field."

* * *

THIS western campaign starts a new chapter in the Red Sox rush for the pennant and a possible world's championship. Now is the time to get into the Boston AMERICAN contest for free tickets for the world's series. If the Sox win, every "fan" in Boston will be baseball mad and they'll all wish they were there. The Boston AMERICAN will take care of twenty of them, and it's time now to start work to get those free tickets, with all expenses paid.

FREE TICKETS TO BALL GAMES

Today is a half-holiday for a large majority of the working people, and there is no better way to enjoy it than to attend the Pilgrim-Cardinal double-header.

The AMERICAN offers an opportunity to everyone to see these games free. All the newsboys and newsdealers have been giving away baseball coupons with the AMERICAN each day.

Be sure and get one of these and save it. Watch the sport pages each day for the list of numbers, and if the coupon which you hold should correspond with one of the numbers printed in the AMERICAN daily bring it to the AMERICAN Promotion Department, No. 5 Winthrop square, and receive a free grandstand ticket.

On Monday, there will be a new method of distributing tickets. In the early editions of the AMERICAN, the Special Edition, the Extra City Edition, the Second Edition, the State Street Edition and the Home Edition, there will be 50 specially numbered tickets.

In the other afternoon editions, namely, the Fifth Edition, the 10 P. M. Edition, and the Baseball Editions, there will be another set of 50 tickets, so that if you do not happen to see your number in the early editions, you are likely to find it in the later ones in the afternoon.

New Directors Head the Pilgrim A. A.

With a new directorate and a new matchmaker, the Pilgrim A. A. will continue to do business at the old stand at the Boston Arena.

Three of the former six directors resigned from the club yesterday. They were Al McCormack, Andy Kelly, William M. J. Flynn and Jimmy White, while Frank Lavelle, the press agent, has also severed his connection with the organization.

The affairs of the Pilgrim Club are now in the hands of Alex McLean, the new matchmaker; W. A. Lougee, manager of the Boston Arena building; H. D. Forbes, E. F. Hutchinson and W. J. Anderson, other directors, still identified with the club. An addition to this roster is Con Keefe, a liquor dealer, who is said to be heavily interested in the club.

The club intends to close down November 1. This is the announcement Manager Lougee made yesterday, and it should set at rest all rumors that there will be no hockey in the Arena next Winter.

On November 1 a six-day bicycle race will be held at the Arena, and directly after its close the building will be put in shape for ice skating, which begins the second week in November.

WOLGAST'S PRICE TAKES BIG BOOST

SAN FRANCISCO, July 27.—Ad Wolgast and Mrs. Wolgast are on their way to Cadillac, Mich., negotiations between the champion and Promoter Coffroth for a match with Ritchie, Rivers or McFarland yesterday having failed. Wolgast demanded $15,000. His figure for Joe Rivers was $20,000, and he scheduled the same amount for McFarland.

The demands of the champion with the further provision for a share of the moving picture rights, caused Promoter Coffroth to declare the negotiations off.

ADAMS BROTHERS SAIL.

PARIS, July 27.—Platt Adams, Ben Adams, Egon Erickson, the New York policeman; Harry Grumpelt and Leo Gehring of the American Olympic team have sailed for home on the Majestic. The rest of the American team, including A. B. Duke, Hawkins, Horine, Philbrook, McClure and Lippincott, will compete here tomorrow.

PILGRIMS IN A DOUBLE-HEADER

The Pilgrims and St. Louis Cardinals will play a double-header at the Walpole street grounds this afternoon, the first game to be called at 2 o'clock.

The double-header was carded because of the delay of the St. Louis team yesterday. The Cards' train was delayed in the vicinity of Detroit.

Manager Kling will trot out Hub Perdue and Buster Brown, while Sallee and Willis will probably work for the Cardinals.

The Pilgrims have had more than the usual measure of hard luck on the Western trip. They played great ball, but were beaten out by one run in most of the games.

When the Pilgrims can hold teams like Chicago, Pittsburg, Cincinnati and St. Louis to one run wins, it is an indication of big improvement in the team's play. In the last four games their opponents made only eight runs to three for Boston. The pitchers did excellent work in three games, but errors handicapped them.

Somerville Teams to Meet in Title Series

Final arrangements have been made for a three-game series between the Bennett A. A. and the Somerville B. B. C. for a purse of $200 and the championship of Somerville.

The first game will be played on the City Field, the home grounds of the Somerville B. B. C. on next Saturday, August 3. The second game will take place on Lincoln Park and the third if necessary will be played on neutral grounds. It is believed if the two teams should play a third contest they will meet on the new Recreation Field.

The two managers also decide that an umpire who will officiate must not be connected in any way with the two teams. They are seriously considering Pete McLoughlin, who has impired the games in the Suburban School League. It was also decided that each team could use twelve players, allowing for sickness and accidents.

East Boston to Have Big Water Carnival

A water carnival will be held under the auspices of the East Boston Swimming Club at Wood Island Park, Saturday, August 17. The committee in charge of affairs are making good their efforts to make this carnival the biggest and best ever held in New England.

The swimming club has secured the services of William Murphy of the city of Boston bath department, and hope with his aid to make the event a rattling success.

The list of events are as follows: Boys, 10 to 12, 50-yard swim and diving for form; from 12 to 15, 50-yard swim, 100-yard swim and diving for form; from 15 to 18, 100-yard swim, 440-yard swim, diving for form and competition for life saving; girls, 10 to 12, 25-yard swim and diving for form; 12 to 15, 25-yard swim, 50-yard swim and diving for form; 15 to 18, 50-yard swim, 100-yard swim, diving for form, competition for life saving. Races will also be held for girls under 10 years of age.

The following events are handicap events and open to all amateurs: 100 yards, 440 yards, one and one-half miles. These events will be open to East Boston only: 100 yards, 440 yards, mile, obstacle and a consolation race of 22 yards. Entries can be made with Matthew Leary, Wood Island Park.

Carmen Is Favorite in Big Bike Race

Thousands of fans will turn out tonight for the big one-hour motor-paced brassard race at the Revere cycle track. Great interest is being manifested in the race, as four of the best riders in the country are lined up for the long ride.

Jimmy Moran, the popular performer from Chelsea, has certainly come back. The speed he has been showing in his recent races has opened the eyes of the fans, and they all acknowledge that he is riding better than in years.

George Wiley will make a desperate effort to get back into the good graces of the crowd. Despite the fact that he had been a consistent winner before the public the past three years, he has been beaten in his last two races.

Carmen has now taken the place of Wiley in the estimation of the fans, and it is to get back his position of "favorite" that he will ride for all that is in him in the hour event tonight.

Joe Nelson, the fourth rider, is quietly training, and, barring accidents, will give the crowd a surprise. He can travel the hour and travel it fast.

Baseball News and Gossip

Rube Marquard will hit the boards before the bright lights this coming Winter to occupy his mind and also to keep the money coming in. Rube has accepted a flattering offer on the vaudeville stage and already has his show places booked. He will do an elaborate stunt with a number of show girls and undoubtedly will be a strong drawing card.

* * *

It will be remembered that a few years ago the Red Sox traded Cy Morgan to the Athletics for Schlitzer. Schlitzer proved to be of no use to the Boston team, while Morgan turned out to be one of Connie Mack's most valuable pitchers for a couple of seasons. Now Schlitzer and Morgan are teammates on the Kansas City team.

* * *

Barney Reilly, the Brockton boy who was given a tryout with the Brooklyn team in the National League, is now playing with the St. Joseph team in the Western League. Since going to St. Joe Barney has found his batting eye and clipping the ball very close to the .300 mark.

* * *

Dode Paskert gives a good reason why he is hitting for over .300. Paskert says every time he has the pitcher in a hole, two strikes and three balls, he always swats at the next ball pitched, for he figures that the pitcher will try to slip over a strike. Sounds like good stuff.

* * *

"Ty Cobb is not a human being, that's all," says Umpire Bill Dineen. "He's the man from Mars, or from some other circumambient suburb, and you can't figure him on the same basis that you do other ball players. None of the rest are in his class. Never before in athletics has there been a man whose mind and muscles work in such perfect harmony."

* * *

"It's about time for the big league scouts to start buying up the good Central League prospects. Nearly every club in the league has one or more players that have attracted the attention of the gumshoe artists and sales should start soon.

Nobody uses as many men during a season as does McGraw. By pursuing that policy he gives his subs practice in actual strife, thus seeing that hey get valuable practice for emergencies and for future service as regulars.

* * *

Few Central League backstops have gone to the big leagues in recent years, but most of those who have gone up stayed. Forrest Cary is dividing the work with Bill Carrigan for the Boston Red Sox and Alva Williams is working regularly behind the bat for Washington. Cady was with Evansville in the Central and Williams was with Terre Haute. Jack Onslow, with Fort Wayne last year, has made good as second catcher of the Tigers. Williams and Cady went to the American League from the International circuit.

* * *

Johnny Kane, ex-member of the Red and Cub teams, is batting close to .400 in the Pacific Coast League, and is stealing bases like a kleptomaniac.

* * *

Christy Mathewson has averaged twenty-five victories a year with the Giants in the twelve years he has worked. His low run was done in 1900 and his high run, thirty-seven, in 1908. He must keep going at the present rate for seven more years to equal Cy Young's game-winning mark.

* * *

Jack Doyle, International League umpire, says of Tommy McMillan: "He is playing better ball than any shortstop in the league, is hitting well and can run bases. If the Yankees get him you can quote me as saying they will not be stung."

* * *

The Phillies tried doctoring the ball the last time Lavender pitched against them. Chance put up an awful shout. Umpire Rigler grabbed the ball for evidence and it will be used in the prosecution of the Phillies for unsportsmanlike conduct.

* * *

Some baseball manager has said that he wants to see one game played as it ought to be played.

"How's that?" another manager asked.

"Well, I'd have an infield made up of sporting editors, a bleacher enthusiast to pitch and an outfield composed of grandstand fans. Then I'd like to umpire."

Swedish Games Are Financial Failure

LONDON, July 27.—It is expected that the Swedish Olympic games at Stockholm, just ended, will prove a failure financially.

This experience is similar to that of the English at London, in 1908, where the reports of high prices and the enormous outlay for the Stadium resulted in a large loss for the Britishers.

The Swedish and other papers before the games printed stories of the prohibitive prices which would be charged at Stockholm and frightened away many thousands of the visitors who otherwise would have come to the games.

The management of the Olympics tried in every way to offset the damage done by the newspaper stories, but the impression prevailed that accommodations would be hard to obtain and high priced, while, as a matter of fact, there were plenty of vacant rooms in the hotels and boarding houses at reasonable prices.

You see the AMERICAN everywhere—in the homes, clubs, restaurants, hotels, cars and boats.

Want Gotch to Bar Toe Hold in Match

KANSAS CITY, July 27.—If Frank Gotch, world's wrestling champion, will consent to bar the toe hold his opponent here in Convention Hall on the night of August 21 will be Jess Westergaard; if the champion insists upon retaining his "trilby twister," some foreigner will have to take the dose.

When Emil Klank, Gotch's manager, was here a few days ago, he stated that Gotch probably would discard the toe hold in a match with any of the American wrestlers, but that he would insist on using it in engagements with foreigners.

By using the toe hold the champion threw Westergaard two years ago, and he left his right foot in such bad shape that Jess was unable to wrestle for several weeks.

WORD TO WORLD SERIES VOTERS

Activity—lots of it—that's the watchword for the next three days in the American's World's Series Contest.

The polls close on next Wednesday morning at 11 o'clock for the first vote list of the candidates which will appear in the Sunday AMERICAN August 4.

The Contest Editor wants photographs. Candidates are invited to send in their pictures—good ones—and as often as space will allow these will be reproduced in the daily and Sunday AMERICAN so that AMERICAN readers everywhere will have an opportunity to know for whom they are voting.

Don't forget the big ten-vote coupon tomorrow. Remember it only takes 100 of these big votes to make 1,000. And every thousand is necessary for the first printed list.

If the Red Sox win the pennant well and good. If not, it does not matter where the championship games are held, the twenty winners in the Baseball Contest will be the guests of the AMERICAN just the same whether it be in Chicago, St. Louis, Boston or New York.

So pile up the vote, boys, before next Wednesday morning at 11 o'clock.

You will need every one you can get your hands on for the first vote standing for which the polls close Wednesday.

Draw Still Keeps Marshall in Lead

BRESLAU, July 27.—By drawing his game in the seventh round against R. Teichmann, winner of the Carlsbad tournament, Frank J. Marshall, the United States chess champion, was enabled to keep his place in the van of the masters engaged in the international tournament in progress in this city.

The American's relative position, however, largely depends upon the outcome of the game between Rubinstein, the Russian champion, and Duras of Prague, which, after a very hard fight, was adjourned.

Adjourned games from the fourth round were recorded as follows: Breyer defeated Treybal and Cohn won from Prezepiorka.

After seven rounds, the standing of the competitors is as follows:

	Won.	Lost.		Won.	Lost.
Marshall	5½	1½	Duras	3	3
Tarrasch	5	2	Breyer	3	4
Rubinstein	4½	1½	Spielmann	3	4
Lewitzky	4½	2½	Burn	3	4
Teichmann	4½	2½	Mieses	2	5
Cohn	4	3	Prezepiorka	2	5
Schlechter	4	3	Balla	1½	5½
Barasz	3½	2½	Lowtzky	1½	5½
Treybal	3½	[illegible]

The pairing for the eighth round is scheduled as follows: Barasz vs. Marshall; Burn vs. Carls; Breyer vs. Lowtzky; Schlechter vs. Spielmann; Cohn vs. Balla; Mieses vs. Tarrasch; Duras vs. Treybal; Prezepiorka vs. Rubinstein; Lewitzky vs. Teichmann.

Daysey Mayme and Her Folks

WHEN FATHER ENTERTAINS

By FRANCES L. GARSIDE.

THERE is a rule among hospitable women that a guest should never be left alone a minute. The same rule applies to thieves, but, of course, for a different reason.

The observance of this rule at the Appleton home causes great worry in the last half hour before dinner is served when Mrs. Lysander John's duties take her to the kitchen. It is at such trying times that Lysander John is pressed into service. He must "entertain" the guest.

This is his usual procedure:

"Did I ever show you?" he asked Mrs. Blank, the visitor, "the picture of the bear I killed last Summer?"

He never had, and Lysander John opens a drawer in a bookcase and turns the contents on the floor, but can't find the picture.

"Maw," he calls to his wife, "where's the picture of the bear I killed last Summer?"

It is the psychological moment with Mrs. Appleton when the steak needs turning, but she rushes to the parlor, finds the picture under her husband's nose, and rushes back to the kitchen.

The gravy had reached a crisis when Lysander John calls out that Mrs. Blank wants to see that picture of their Summer home, and he can't find it.

Gravy is temperamental and won't wait, and Mrs. Appleton stirs it for dear life, while screaming to her husband that he will find it in a collection of pictures on the piano.

A sound of something falling. Lysander John has upset all the photographs on the floor and can't find that of his Summer home.

"Maybe," suggests the visitor hopefully, "it is in the bookcase."

A mass of books are thrown to the floor, and he can't find it, and as his wife refuses to leave her gravy, he gives it up and looks for an elk tooth.

He turns over the gold fish in searching for that trophy, and later in looking for an autograph letter from General Grant, upsets the piano stool and knocks all the bric-a-brac off the mantel.

Every few minutes appeals are sent to the kitchen beginning with "I can't find," and every appeal is answered by minute directions for finding what he is looking for, right under his nose.

Every few minutes there is a crash of books, bric-a-brac or furniture, and when Mrs. Appleton has put the dinner on the table and appears to call her guest, the parlor looks as if Republicans had been holding a convention there.

"It is your fault," Lysander John always says, looking at the wreckage around him and the dust and water on his clothes, "I don't see why you women take such pains to hide things where a man can't find them?"

Up-to-Date Jokes

One of a party left his corner seat in an already crowded railway carriage to go in search of something to eat, leaving a bag to reserve his place. Returning, he found that, in spite of the bag and the protests of his fellow passengers, the seat had been usurped by a well-dressed woman. With flashing eyes she turned upon him.

"Do you know, sir, that I am one of the director's wives?"

"Madam," he replied, "were you the director's only wife I should still protest."

Tramp—Madam, can you help a poor man with a wife and eleven children at home?

Housewife—Are you very needy?

Tramp—Needy!—is no word for it, ma'am. I couldn't see the little ones suffer so I left them to ask the assistance of the charitable.

Housewife—Did you leave home today?

Tramp—No, ma'am; it will be seven years tomorrow. Can't you help a man who wants to surprise his little ones?

No. 61.—Warren Objects to the Hotel Extras and Tells Helen to Look Up Apartments

"BATHS, nineteen shillings! How in thunder do they get that?" demanded Warren, as he frowned down at the hotel bill he had just opened.

Helen, who was straightening up the tray of her trunk, came and looked over his shoulder.

"But you said they charged extra for baths, dear."

"Of course," he snapped; "but not that much. It's only a shilling a bath, and we haven't had more than two a day. That'd be fourteen shillings. This bill is for the week that ended Thursday, and two nights there you had tonsilitis and couldn't bathe."

"Oh, yes, I bathed in the room. Don't you remember, the maid brought in that tin tub? I suppose they charge more for that."

"Couldn't charge enough to make nineteen shillings."

"Wait, dear. I think I've one of the hotel booklets. I brought it up last night to send home."

It was a blue and gilt booklet, giving views of the corridors and lounging rooms, which somehow looked much more luxurious in the pictures than in the hotel.

Warren turned to the back, where a list of "tariffs" were given.

"Here we are. Baths:

Sponge or hip bath in bedroom	0	6
Cold bath in bathroom	1	0
Hot or tepid bath in bathroom	1	6

"The devil! If they don't charge sixpence more if you have your bath warm. Like to know how they can tell after you get in the bathroom whether you take it hot or cold."

A Scheme

"But, dear, the bathrooms are kept locked and the maid prepares the baths. She runs it hot or cold, just as you say—doesn't she?"

"Well, what's to prevent you from saying cold, then, when you get in, turn on the hot water and save the sixpence?"

"Why, that could be done," admitted Helen, wonderingly; "couldn't it?"

"Course it could. And your Englishmen are so thick headed they'd never think of it."

"But, perhaps, they think any one who comes to this hotel wouldn't do a thing like that for a sixpence."

"The deuce they wouldn't! The Englishmen look out for their sixpences, all right. They're about as close-fisted as they make 'em."

He threw down the booklet, took up the bill and figured a few moments on the back of it.

"That's it—that makes the nineteen shillings. They've charged us one and six for every blessed bath."

"But, dear, they were warm baths. Neither of us took them cold."

"Huh, and you think I'm going to pay that extra sixpence for a dash of hot water? I'll put up a kick on that, and a mighty strong one, too." He slipped the bill in his pocket. "I'll see about this after breakfast. Hurry up now; do you know it's half-past eight?"

"Yes, dear; I'll be ready in a moment."

"Then I'll go down and order. What do you want—bacon and eggs? That seems to be the regulation breakfast."

When a little later Helen joined Warren downstairs in the restaurant he was so absorbed in a newspaper that he did not see her until she had slipped into the seat opposite.

Looking for a Flat?

"Look here," handing her the paper and pointing to a column headed, "FLATS, CHAMBERS AND UPPER PARTS TO LET." "If I'm to be over here a month longer, why shouldn't we take a small furnished flat instead of being 'done' by these confounded hotels? When I was here before I had what they call 'bachelors' chambers' on Hanover square, and it was mighty comfortable, too—not half of what we are paying here. We could have our own bath and live like civilized beings, instead of being cooped up here in one room, washing our faces in those blamed china bowls and sneaking out as if we were going to rob a hen-roost every time we took a bath."

"But, dear, how about service? And we'd have to have breakfast."

"Oh, you can always get that in London. If they don't have regular service there's always the janitor's wife or somebody who'll look after you. But we'll see. I'll have a talk with the clerk here and find out what he'll do about these baths. I'm not so keen on moving, but I won't put up with any such overcharge as that. Here, waiter," as the breakfast was brought on, "bring us some of those toasted muffins."

After breakfast Helen went up to their room to put on her hat and veil. When she came down Warren was still standing at the desk, in angry dispute. Then he drew out his wallet and clanged some gold pieces down on the counter.

"Just receipt that, will you? You've got your prices for your baths, and you'll get your room with it. We'll find some place where it costs less to keep clean."

The clerk made some murmured apologetic remark about "the regular rates of the hotel." But Warren pocketed the receipted bill and strode over to Helen.

"Ready?"

Outside he unfolded the paper to the "FLATS, CHAMBERS AND UPPER PARTS."

"Now, this is your job for the day. Cut out the sightseeing and look up an apartment. I'd go with you if I had the time, but I haven't; so you'll have to go alone. We'll not stay in that hotel after tomorrow. I'll teach that manager a thing or two about Americans."

"But, dear, I know so little about London. How can I find an apartment?"

Picking One Out

"Dead easy! I'll mark a few of these places that look promising, so you won't get into any off-colored neighborhood. Now, here," as he took a pencil and began at the top of the list—

> 'A LADY wishes to let her really exquisitely furnished balcony flat at once; reception, two bedrooms, bath; piano, plate and linen; lift and electric lights. Apply 29 High st., Kensington.'

"That's a good one to try first. Almost any of these buses marked 'Kensington' will take you right there. Here's another."

"But, Warren, we can't stand here on the street and go over this. Can't we go somewhere and sit down?"

"Nonsense; I haven't time for that. Now, listen to this—

> 'HANDSOMELY furnished flat; sitting, bed and bath room; 5 gns. p. w., incls. attendance, service and valeting; excellent catering; moderate tariff. Haddon Mans., 18 Clifford, off Bond, Piccadilly.'

"That sounds good, and it's central, too. I'll mark that. Now here's another:

> 'FULHAM MANSION, Fulham road, Southwest—Beautifully appointed furnished flats; lift, speaking tubes, liveried porters, children's playground, clubhouse with two billiard tables. All Putney buses pass the door. Ring up 267 Mayfair.'

"Afraid that's too far out. Now here's one in South Kensington. I'll mark that. Here's another near Oxford Circus. And here's one on Russell square. No," rubbing his last pencil mark, "Russell square and all that British Museum district is overrun with Americans. 'School teachers' heaven,' they call it. We'll keep clear of that. Here's a place on Victoria street; that's a good location. It's up by Westminster. Now I've marked several here, guess that's enough to keep you going for today."

"But, dear, give me some idea of what we ought to pay."

"Well, you ought to get a pretty good furnished flat for about four or five guineas a week. Then, of course, we'd want breakfast served in the room. That shouldn't be more than two shillings apiece—four shillings a day for breakfast. But if you find the thing you like don't stand on the price. A few shillings more or less won't matter. Now I'll have to hustle. You take a Kensington bus from here and try that first place. There's one coming now."

A Certain Charm

There were a dozen questions that Helen wanted to ask, but she had no time, for he put her on the bus, waved a hurried good-by, and then jumped on another bus going in the opposite direction.

As Helen rode toward Kensington she read the advertisements Warren had marked, and many others. There was a certain charm in the quaintness and unusualness of the wording. What would these places be like?

Ever since she was a child Helen had always pictured places in advance, and now she tried to picture these. She had read a few English novels in which the scenes had been laid in bachelor halls or chambers, and from which she was now unconsciously drawing her pictures.

But the romance and adventure of it all was somewhat clouded by the feeling of responsibility. Warren expected her to find a suitable apartment. She must not disappoint him. She must not admit that she was less capable than he thought her.

"High street, Kensington!" shouted the conductor.

Helen climbed out. She paused on the corner, again looked at the advertisement to be sure of the number, and then up and down the street to see which way the numbers ran.

Her first day of flat hunting in London had begun.

Little Bobbie's Pa

By WILLIAM F. KIRK

THAT was a funny thing that happened the other day, sed Pa to Ma. A man cum into the hallway of this here flat bilding, and asked me if I had any old clothes to sell. I had to look at the poor simp a moment first, sed Pa, to see if he wasn't dangerous or if he was, but as soon as I was sure that thare wasent vary much to be feared from him I started to laff at him.

What is the matter? sed Ma. Are you crazy with the heat?

No, sed Pa, I am not crazy with the heat but can you beat it, the idee of a man asking me if I have any old clothes. He ought to know that I had old clothes, sed Pa. He cud see them on me. The nerve of him, Pa sed. Have I any old clothes. Ha Ha, sed Pa. Look at the fringe on these pants.

Fringe on pants aint any disgrace, sed Ma. Many honest peepul has fringe on pants.

Well, sed Pa, I will tell you something now. The next man that cums along & looks at my suit of clothes & asks me if I have any old clothes to sell is going to get a larrup in his left lamp. That's the kind of a sport I am. I doant mind beeing called a night owl, sed Pa, or anything like that, but wen anybody cums to my house & asks me if I have any old clothes to sell, I am going to the mat with him.

Well, sed Ma, now that you have delivered your littel monologue, I want to tell you sumthing difernt. A frend of mine told me that she was cumming up here this nite. She is a gurl that makes her own living, now that she has left her husband, sed Ma. I certingly admire her for it.

Admire her for what? sed Pa. For making her living or leaving her husband?

I admire her for making her living, sed Ma. She is working for a health magazeen, sed Ma, riteing essays about healthful dishes to eet. Here is one of the dishes that she told me about. Ma was going to tell Pa, but jest then Missus Blake calm in. She was the woman that Ma had been talking about wen Pa first calm hoam.

Here is Missus Blake now, sed Ma. Tell my husband, after you have took off yure wraps, what is the moast delishus dish that you evver cooked.

I will tell you, sed Missus Blake. First you taik two eggs & then you taik four or five prunes. Then you boil the prunes & scramble the eggs & add a dash of cooking sherry & stick a sprig of parsley into the top of the prunes.

You are a wise cook, aren't you, sed Pa. He thought Missus Blake was kidding him, & I guess she was at that, beckaus wen Pa asked her what her husband did for a living she sed Oh, he buys old clothes.

Poor Pa. I guess he will have to buy a new suit.

PART I.—(Continued.)

"WHO were the first to rush in here after the Parrishes gave the alarm?"

"One or two of the musicians from the end of the hall. They had just finished their program and were preparing to leave the gallery. Naturally they reached her first."

"Good! Their names?"

"Mark Sowerby and Claus Hennerberg. Honest Germans—men who have played here for years."

"And who followed them? Who came next on the scene?"

"Some people from the lobby. They heard the disturbance and rushed up pell-mell. But not one of these touched her. Later her father came."

"Who did touch her? Anybody before the father came in?"

"Yes; Miss Clarke, the middle-aged lady with the Parrishes. She had run toward Miss Challoner as soon as she heard her fall, and was sitting there with the dead girl's head in her lap when the musicians showed themselves."

"I suppose she has been carefully questioned?"

"Very, I should say."

"And she speaks of no weapon?"

"No. Neither she nor any one else at that moment suspected murder or even a violent death. All thought it a natural one—sudden, but the result of some secret disease."

"Father and all?"

"Yes."

"But the blood? Surely there must have been some show of blood?"

"They say not. No one noticed any. Not till the doctor came—her doctor, who was happily in his office in this very building. He saw the drops, and uttered the first suggestion of murder."

"How long after was this? Is there any one who has ventured to make an estimate of the number of minutes which elapsed from the time she fell to the moment when the doctor first raised the cry of murder?"

Probing the Case

"Yes. Mr. Slater, the assistant manager, who was in the lobby at the time, says that ten minutes at least must have elapsed."

"Ten minutes and no blood! The weapon must have been there. Some weapon with a short and inconspicuous handle. I think they said there were flowers over and around the place where she was struck?"

"Yes, great big scarlet ones. Nobody noticed—nobody looked. A panic like that seems to paralyze people."

"Ten minutes! I must see every one who approached her during those ten minutes. Every one, Sweetwater, and I must myself talk with Miss Clarke."

"You will like her. You will believe every word she says."

"No doubt. All the more reason why I must see her. Sweetwater, some one drew that weapon out. Effects still have their causes, notwithstanding the new cult. The question is who? We must leave no stone unturned to find that out."

"The stones have all been turned over once."

"By you?"

"Not altogether by me."

"Then they will bear being turned over again. I want to be witness of the operation."

"Where will you see Miss Clarke?"

"Wherever she pleases—only I can't walk far."

"I think I know the place. You shall have the use of this elevator. It has not been running since last night or it would be full of curious people all the time, hustling to get a glimpse of this place. But they'll put a man on for you."

A Charming Witness

"Very good; manage it as you will. I'll wait here till you're ready. Explain yourself to the lady. Tell her I'm an old and rheumatic invalid who has been used to asking his own questions. I'll not trouble her much. But there is one point she must make clear to me."

Sweetwater did not presume to ask what point, but he hoped to be fully enlightened when the time came.

And he was. Mr. Gryce had undertaken to educate him for this work, and never missed the opportunity of giving him a lesson. The three met in a private sitting room on an upper floor, the detectives entering first and the lady coming in soon after.

As her quiet figure appeared in the doorway, Sweetwater stole a glance at Mr. Gryce. He was not looking directly at anybody; but he formed his impressions for all that, and Sweetwater was anxious to make sure of these impressions. There was no doubting them in this instance. Miss Clarke was not a woman to rouse an unfavorable opinion in any man's mind. Of slight, almost frail build, she had that peculiar animation which goes with a speaking eye and a widely sympathetic nature. Without any substantial claims to beauty, her expression was so womanly and so sweet that she was invariably called lovely.

Mr. Gryce was engaged at the moment in shifting his cane from the right hand to the left, but his manner was never more encouraging or his smile more benevolent.

Miss Clarke's Story

"Pardon me," he apologized, with one of his old-fashioned bows. "I'm sorry to trouble you after all the distress you must have been under this morning. But there is something I wish to ask you in regard to the dreadful occurrence in which you played so kind a part. You were the first to reach the prostrate woman, I believe."

"Yes. The boys jumped up and ran towards her, but they were frightened by her looks and left it for me to put my hands under her and try to lift her up."

"Did you manage it?"

"I succeeded in getting her head into my lap, nothing more."

"And sat so?"

"For some little time. That is, it seemed long, though I believe it was not more than a minute before two men came running from the musicians' gallery. One thinks so fast at such a time—and feels so much."

"You knew she was dead, then?"

"I felt her to be so."

"How felt?"

"I was sure—I never questioned it."

"You have seen women in a faint?"

"Yes, many times."

What made the difference? Why should you believe Miss Challoner dead simply because she lay still and apparently lifeless?"

A Suggestion

"I cannot tell you. Possibly death tells its own story. I only know how I felt."

"Perhaps there was another reason. Perhaps, consciously or unconsciously, you laid your palm upon her heart?"

Miss Clarke started and her sweet face showed a moment's perplexity.

"Did I?" she queried musingly. Then with a sudden access of feeling, "I may have done so, indeed, I believe I did. My arms were around her; it would not have been an unnatural action."

"No; a very natural one, I should say. Cannot you tell me positively whether you did this or not?"

"Yes, I did. I had forgotten it, but I remember now." And the glance she cast him while not meeting his eye showed that she understood the importance of the admission. "I know," she said, "what you are going to ask me now. Did I feel anything there but the flowers and the tulle? No, Mr. Gryce, I did not. There was no poniard in the wound."

Mr. Gryce felt around, found a chair and sank into it.

"You are a truthful woman," said he. "And," he added more slowly, "composed enough in character I should judge not to have made any mistake on this very vital point."

"I think so, Mr. Gryce. I was in a state of excitement, of course; but the woman was a stranger to me, and my feelings were not unduly agitated."

"Sweetwater, we can let my suggestion go in regard to those ten minutes I spoke of. The time is narrowed down to one, and in that one, Miss Clarke was the only person to touch her."

"The only one," echoed the lady, catching perhaps the slight rising sound of query in his voice.

"I will trouble you no further." So said the old detective, thoughtfully. "Sweetwater, help me out of this." His eye was dull and his manner betrayed exhaustion. But vigor returned to him before he had well reached the door, and he showed some of his old spirit as he thanked Miss Clarke and turned to take the elevator.

"But one possibility remains," he confided to Sweetwater, as they stood waiting at the elevator door. "Miss Challoner died from a stab. The next minute she was in this lady's arms. No weapon protruded from the wound, nor was any found on or near her in the mezzanine. What follows? She struck the blow herself, and the strength of purpose which led her to do this gave her the additional force to pull the weapon out and fling it from her. It did not fall upon the floor around her; therefore it flew through one of those openings into the lobby, and there it will be, or has been found."

It was this statement, otherwise worded, which gave me my triumph over George.

Matrimony De Luxe

By DOROTHY DIX

HOW big a bank account should a young man have before he asks the modern maiden to marry him?

A millionaire Chicago father, whose daughter's marriage to a poor young man has been broken off, has been expressing his views on the subject, and this is what he says:

"If a young man expects to marry the daughter of a well-to-do family he should be prepared to furnish her with the comforts of her father's home. She should have the best of food, clothes, amusements and friends, and her husband should have a sufficient reserve fund for any sort of sickness or misfortune.

"In other words, when a girl leaves her father's home to go with a husband she should feel that there has been little change in her life—either in her habits, ideals, hopes, ambitions or material comfort. It is the violent transitions that you should avoid in marriage."

It is to be hoped that not many fathers hold such expansive views of what a young man should be able to give his wife when he marries her as does this Chicago father. Otherwise there is likely to be a record-breaking crop of old maids in the country.

For what this father demands is that the young husband shall begin where the father leaves off, that the young man just commencing his career shall be able to supply a young woman with as many luxuries as does her father, who has had a lifetime in which to make a fortune.

No young man, unless he has inherited money, is able to support a wife in the comfort and style to which she has been accustomed as the daughter of a successful father, and any man who expects that of a son-in-law is asking the impossible, and also displaying a singular lack of sense and judgment.

The young husband who can take his bride to live in a fine house with a host of servants, who can give her automobiles and trips to Europe, and the gowns and jewels such as she has been used to, must be the son of rich parents, accustomed to living on an allowance himself, and the commonest observation will show that not one out of a hundred rich youths is fit for any woman to marry. As a general thing they are idle, spoiled, worthless, dissipated, with no knowledge of money save how to spend it.

It is said that in America it is but two generations from shirt sleeves to shirt sleeves. For a girl it may be said with equal truth that when she marries she may decide whether she would prefer to be rich when she's young and poor when she's old, or poor when she's young and rich when she's old.

That is about the way it goes, for the woman who marries the son of a rich father usually dresses in silks when she's young and is glad to get homespuns when she's old, while the girl who married a poor and ambitious young fellow and who pushed her own baby carriage when she was young rides in her own limousine when she is old.

Just as a financial proposition, and taking matrimony for the long pull, as they say in State Street, it is a better investment for a girl to marry a man who is getting $2,500 a year as a salary that he is earning himself by his own ability, than one who has an income of $25,000 a year that he inherited, and that represents somebody else's intelligence and industry.

I do not advocate the folly of marriage on a shoe string. Before any man asks a woman to be his wife he should be making a decent living, enough to provide them with the ordinary comforts of life, enough to keep the wolf reasonably far from the door; but if he can do this, and if he has shown that he is a real man who can stand on his own feet, and take care of his own, the girl's father should be satisfied. He should ask no more money of the suitor.

Nor should the girl. Any woman who does not love the man she marries well enough to do without some of the luxuries she has been accustomed to in her father's house for his sake has a pretty poor and lukewarm brand of affection. If her happiness depends on her having as many clothes, and going to as many plays, and giving as fine dinners as she has always done, the man who misses getting her ought to go down on his knees and thank heaven for his escape.

She isn't a woman. She is a doll baby. She hasn't a heart. She is stuffed with sawdust. She wouldn't make a man a helpmate. She would be a millstone around his neck to the longest day of existence.

It is, perhaps, natural that a father who has pampered his daughter all of her life should desire that she should always be kept in pink cotton in a satin-lined box, but he hasn't got any right to shunt this burden on another man's shoulders. It is nothing more than simple justice that if he demands luxuries for her he should supply them herself.

In this democratic country men do not demand dowries with their wives as they do on the Continent, but there is much to be said in favor of the dot system. If a girl has been raised up to be helpless, extravagant, with no knowledge of how to cook or sew, it is no more than fair that her parents should furnish the money to gratify her tastes and hire somebody else to do the work they have not fitted her to do, instead of demanding that some poor young husband shall slave himself to death to support her.

The father who does not want his daughter to marry any but a rich man deprives the girl of the greatest happiness that can come to any woman, and that is of helping the man she loves: of being the comrade who stands shoulder to shoulder with him while he fights his battle for success, and who shares with him every interest, every ambition, and so becomes one with him in a sense that no woman is ever one with the rich man she marries.

That is the great American romance. It begins with two rooms and a cook stove, and ends in a palace: whereas the marriage that begins in an automobile and a bridal tour to Europe only too often ends in Reno.

The Manicure Lady

By WILLIAM F. KIRK

"THERE was a most peculiar kind of a old maid up to the house last night, George," said the Manicure Lady. "I never seen her before, but Wilfred met she and her brother down to one of them settlement workers' gatherings, and Wilfred invited the two of them up to the house to dinner last evening. The poor simp forgot all about inviting them, and mother didn't have enough in the house to make a good showing for company, so she was that put out she didn't get it out of her system all the evening. The old gent was kind of put out himself, because he and mother and me and Mayme had intended to go over and see some moving pictures. Billy Woods had it all framed for us. But as long as the company came we all had to make the best of it, so what little food we had was parcelled out with the utmost care, as them authors say when they write about the wilds of Alaska or a shipwreck.

"The old maid's brother wasn't a bad sort; a little simple, like brother Wilfred, but good natured and kind of good looking. But the old maid herself! Say, George, in some previous carnation she must have been one of them Brazil nuts. Do you know the line of talk and deep thought she pulled? She said that the old maids was the real spiritual mothers of the human race, and that if it wasn't for them, men would amount to nothing at all. She said that men was way beneath women anyway you figure it, because they had to get out to work at an early age and didn't have a chance to get wised up for that reason."

"I always thought that getting out to work at an early age was what wised men up," said the Head Barber. "I never had a chance to go to school much, so maybe I am prejudiced, but I think I learned more in the first ten years I was out hustling for myself than a lot of college boys will ever know."

"That's what the old gent said," agreed the Manicure Lady. "The old gent never had much book learning either, but I notice that he managed to struggle along in his quiet way and raise our family right. All of us had good clothes and a good education and plenty to eat, and we all grew up able to do something to comfort his declining days except brother Wilfred, and Wilfred would help support the old gent, too, if he could only get a job and keep it long enough to draw his first envelope. And, by the way, George, speaking about father's declining days, he is declining more than usual lately. Three times last week Wilfred went to him with a polite request for a little pocket money, and the old gent declined every time. He told Wilfred that real pocket money was the kind that stays in the pocket, and offered him a penny for a pocket piece, but that is as far as the poor boy could go, because father's heart is getting more and more like a granite boulder as the swift years drift away into the great past in which none of us can live in no more.

"The old maid didn't win any arguments up to our house, with her theories about men being so inferior to women and about old maids making real spiritual mothers."

"The mother I've got is all the mother I can see," said the Head Barber.

"That's the kind of mother I fancy, too," said the Manicure Lady. "That kind ain't spiritual or spirituelle, George, but there is something kind of solid and nice about them, don't you think?"

TO-DAY'S STOCK MARKETS; FINANCIAL NEWS

Stock Market Fairly Firm and Trading Is Dull

By W. H. ROSS.

W. H. ROSS

STATE STREET, July 27.—Little movement was reported in stock markets anywhere today, and the one in Boston was very dull. Prices ruled firm however. Among coppers which advanced during the morning were Algomah, Superior and Shannon, Butte & Superior, Copper Range, Utah Consolidated and Arizona Commercial were among those quoted lower.

A Butte dispatch states that the Anaconda Company, "for reasons neither apparent nor explained," is reducing production again so that the July output will be about 25,000,000 pounds of copper against 27,000,000 pounds in June.

Hill Stocks in Demand.

The New York market was dull at the opening and Great Northern preferred was about the only issue in much demand for some time. Northern Pacific advanced also. The report that recent strength in these issues is due to buying by houses closely affiliated with James J. Hill was again current on the exchange. Wall Street thinks there is more back of the buying than the prospect of increased earnings through hauling big crops.

Price changes in most issues were limited to small fractions. Most of the trading was in Steel common, Amalgamated, Atchison, Baltimore & Ohio, Erie, Union Pacific and General Electric. The last named opened ⅞ lower and there was only one transaction in this stock recorded in the first fifteen minutes. Most of the specialties which have been active recently were sluggish today. American stocks had a firm tone in the London market, but were narrow in movement.

Curb trading was steady in New York.

New high records for the movement were established at the opening of the New York cotton market, prices advancing from 7 to 13 points and October touching 12.84. It was a weather market and reflected hot, dry conditions in Texas. Assertions were made that the crop there is deteriorating and in urgent need of rain. In the Eastern belt conditions were better, but the trade was inclined to regard the Texas situation as critical. The weather map showed little indication of moisture in the Western belt over Sunday. The Liverpool market closed quiet and steady with spot quiet at steady prices.

Copper in More Dempand.

It is stated that most of the copper bought in this market yesterday was for foreign consumption. It was disposed of at 17⅝ cents a pound. One large agency sold the last of its August supply and there was a little more for next month delivery purchased of small dealers. It is said that some second-hand copper is being sold for October and November delivery at 17⅝ cents a pound and that a little September second-hand can be got for 17½. The one large dealer who opened his books for November yesterday is reported to have sold 225,000 pounds for delivery in that month at 17⅝ cents.

Total deliveries during July are estimated at between 130,000,000 and 135,000,000 pounds, and the Copper Producers' statement is expected to show a decrease, compared with June, of 5,000,000 to 10,000,000 pounds, "which," it is said by the New York Sun, "will place stocks at a minimum dangerously near the vanishing point. There may have been a decrease in refinery production during July because of the weather from the 122,000,000 pounds production in June, which would mean a decrease of more than 10,000,000 in the Producers' statement."

W. F. Bartholomew of Thompson, Towle & Co. wires his firm from Houghton, Michigan: "For the first time in years Franklin, in June, showed a profit from operations. From the treatment of 800 tons of rock daily the company produced 400,000 pounds of copper upon the recovery of only 11 pounds copper per ton of rock. The cost of production was slightly under 16 cents per pound. The company is gradually recovering from the strike recently experienced and within a few days should be hoisting 1,200 tons of rock per day. More attention will be given to the selection of the rock, with the result that the recovery of copper per ton should this month be somewhat higher."

Financial News in Brief.

A meeting of the stockholders of the Fourth National Bank has been called for August 27 to act on the proposed merger of that institution with the Atlantic National Bank.

F. I. Milliken & Co. say that large stockholders predict that next year Isle Royale will produce at least 12,000,000 pounds of copper and possibly 15,000,000 pounds at a cost not materially above 10 cents a pound. To accomplish this, additional stamping facilities will be necessary and the Calumet & Hecla Mining Company is already making additions to its mills to handle a larger output from Isle Royale and other mines.

It is figured that at the 8 per cent. dividend rate now in force, General Electric stockholders are going to get 10 per cent. returns on their holdings, as they have to pay nothing for the new stock to be issued.

Chicago & Northwestern, the second of the big systems to report for June and the fiscal year, showed for June an increase of $139,000 in gross and $35,000 in net, and for the fiscal year a decrease of $1,220,000 in gross and a decrease of $1,136,000 in surplus after all charges. The surplus is equivalent to about 7¼ per cent. on the outstanding stock.

Chairman Winslow S. Pierce of the Wabash executive committee sailed from New York for Europe early today on his yacht Gundreda. So that the voyage should not begin on Friday, departure was delayed until after the stroke of midnight. Mr. Pierce will be the navigating officer.

The United Cigar Stores Company has taken over the Independent Cigar Stores Company, which operated seventeen stores in New Orleans. It is seeking trade all over the South. A statement sent out to its stockholders show assets of $37,796,238, of which $25,525,915 consists of real estate, buildings, mortgages, leaseholds, trade marks, trade names, brands and good will. It is stated that trade marks, trade names, good will, brands, etc., are appraised at $21,400,000.

Aggregate receipts of live stock at the four Atlantic port cities of Boston, New York, Philadelphia and Baltimore, were 4,764,231 head for the half year just ended, as compared with 4,432,679 head for the same period last year.

It is said that defending themselves while on trial on criminal charges, cost the packers in the Beef Trust $750,000, and that one of the reasons for their proposal to voluntarily dissolve the combine is a disinclination to undergo the expense of civil litigation with the government.

When James J. Hill was asked about railroad conditions in the Northwest, he remarked: "You may say that there will be no fear of congestion along the Great Northern. The line is in shape to take care of all the traffic that is offered."

It is stated in New York that it has been discovered that prominent Wall street men had an interest in the brokerage business of J. Thomas Reinhardt, who recently went abroad. Members of the executive committee of his creditors say they have discovered some hidden assets belonging to him. Also that considerable stock purchased by his customers and left with him to sell cannot be found.

EXPERT SAYS IT'S DAKOTA DAN

taking test along strictly scientific lines. He says the test satisfied him beyond doubt that the late Daniel Russell and Dakota Dan came from the same stock and are father and son.

He sums up his deductions with the very expressive phrase, "unmistakable family resemblances," but asserts he failed to find the slightest resemblance in Fresno Dan, the claimant from California.

As a painter who has reproduced on canvas many of the prominent men of the country and their families and whose works have been exhibited at Paris, Mr. Murphy, by long experience, is peculiarly fitted to rank as an expert on head and facial characteristics.

But he did not depend on his own skill entirely.

A comparative strip of photographs of the two Dans and the Senator, published in the AMERICAN some days ago, attracted the attention of Mr. Murphy. He was impressed with what he considered the striking similarity between the pictures of the dead man and Dakota Dan.

The idea developed a theory which Mr. Murphy, at no little sacrifice of time, pursued to a satisfactory conclusion. He had Dakota Dan posed in precisely the same light, under identical conditions, and in the same studio as Senator Russell was photographed in twenty years ago. Even the same photographer took the picture at Notman's, on Park street.

Attorneys William R. Scharton and John H. McNally, counsel for Dakota Dan, have been so deeply impressed by Mr. Murphy's findings that they will introduce him as an expert at the will hearing in East Cambridge.

This will be the first time that expert testimony of this nature ever has been offered in probate litigation.

In addition to submitting this novel line of testimony, Mr. Scharton proposes to resort to the Bertillon system of measurements. Dakota Dan's finger prints already have been taken and he will have his head and features measured. Mr. Scharton will demand that Fresno Dan be subjected to similar measurements.

Mr. Murphy first entered the case to satisfy a personal whim, but as he proceeded he felt that if he could assist in any way as a citizen he would gladly do all in his power. He wishes it made clear that this was his sole motive and that he expects no reward or favor.

Here is his opinion.

By HERMANN DUDLEY MURPHY.
Portrait Painter and Instructor in Drawing at Harvard University.

Certain family resemblances are passed on from generation to generation and are most evident when the type is unusual. That is to say, a man with a commonplace type of head would not pass on to his children as marked characteristics of features as a man with an unusually shaped head or with some unusual feature, strongly marked.

The head of the elder Russell was of an unusual type; not in any respect commonplace. His head was long, forehead high, nose large, as was also the ear. His eyes were prominent and very full above the lids.

In all photographs of Fresno Dan, which have been published, there IS NO TRACE OF ANY OF THESE MARKED CHARACTERISTICS. Fresno Dan's head is of a commonplace type and is not distinguished from other commonplace heads excepting by the unusual angle of the eyes.

No Russell Indications.

This characteristic of the eyes is undoubtedly inherited from some one, but THERE IS NO INDICATION IN THE HEAD OF EITHER MR. OR MRS. DANIEL RUSSELL OF ANY SUCH TYPE OF EYE.

FRESNO DAN'S HEAD IS DIFFERENT IN SHAPE FROM THAT OF THE ELDER RUSSELL. The ear is small and insignificant and very much projecting from the head. The nose is short, the lower part having no resemblance to the Russell nose. The lines at the corners of the eyes do not resemble in any respect the Russell eyes, nor have the eyes the fullness of the lids which was the one marked characteristic of the elder Russell which we do not find in the head of Dakota Dan. The growth of the hair is not in any way similar, neither is the shape of the forehead, nor the neck back of the ear.

In the head of Dakota Dan, on the other hand, the general shape of the head is REMARKABLY LIKE THAT OF THE ELDER RUSSELL. THE EAR IS IDENTICAL. The lower part of the nose is identical, and were it not for the break in the bridge in the nose of the elder Russell, due to a fall, probably the whole nose would be identical with that of Dakota Dan.

The hair at the temple and over the forehead grows IN PRECISELY THE SAME WAY IN BOTH HEADS. The neck, back of the ear, is the same. The shape of the hand is the same—another characteristic nearly always inherited from one of the parents—and though Dakota Dan's hands are roughened by hard work, the same traits of short fingers and wide, strong hand resemble the hands of the elder Russell.

Eyes Like Mrs. Russell.

Dakota Dan's eyes are deep set, like the eyes of his mother. But the lines at the corners are almost identical with those of the father in all the photographs.

It is inconceivable that any one could have seen the remotest resemblance in the head of Dakota Dan in the previous trial to the photographs of any members of the Reseau family. Dakota Dan's head is distinctly a New England type with not a single characteristic of any Latin race or of a French-Canadian. It is the head of a man straightforward, frank, honest and generous.

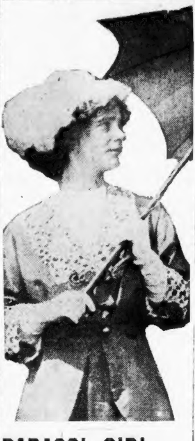
In short, we find in Fresno Dan's head absolutely NO RESEMBLANCE TO THE HEAD OF SENATOR RUSSELL, WHILE IN DAKOTA DAN'S HEAD NEARLY ALL OF THE MARKED CHARACTERISTICS OF SENATOR RUSSELL ARE PRESENT.

Moreover, Dakota Dan's head resembles that of Senator Russell in the points noted much more even than does the head of the elder son, William C. Russell.

All things considered, there are striking and unmistakable family resemblances between the photographs of the late Senator Russell and those of Dakota Dan. Some points of resemblance which I noticed in photographs published a few days ago interested me to make as careful a study as possible of the matter from all the photographs obtainable.

I am satisfied that the points of resemblance enumerated above are NOT CASUAL OR ACCIDENTAL, BUT ARE INHERITED FAMILY TRAITS.

HERE SHE IS!
MEET HER AND
GET THAT $100



PARASOL GIRL WILL BE THERE

Wanted! $100.00 reward!

Not for a dangerous criminal, safebreaker or yeggman, but for a charming woman who will, at the request of the Boston AMERICAN, test your powers of observation at Revere Beach tomorrow afternoon.

Those of us blessed with the power of sight fondly imagine that our eyes are rendering efficient service. That is true, inasmuch as the efficiency and power is there when called upon. But the trouble is not with the eyes themselves—it is with the minds that direct the action of the eyes.

If we go outs for a Sunday afternoon walk the chances are that we will stroll aimlessly on our way, noticing only the ground on which we walk or the sky over our heads. The multitude of people and events passing before us usually remain completely unnoticed.

For Eyes to See.

Those who have eyes that see will do well to take a trip to Revere Beach tomorrow afternoon. A certain lady who will be conspicuous because of her pictures which have been printed each day this week in the AMERICAN, will be at a certain place at a certain time to keep an appointment with AMERICAN readers.

"The Lady with the Green Parasol" will stroll along Ocean avenue, the Beach and the Boulevard, from Condit's Dance Hall to Revere street, between the hours of 2 and 5 p. m. tomorrow.

The man, woman or child who identifies her will receive from her a Boston AMERICAN order for $100 in gold.

The only requirement is that the person who identifies "The Lady with the Green Parasol" have in his or her hand, IN PLAIN SIGHT, a copy of tomorrow's Sunday AMERICAN, and shall say to her: "You are the Lady with the Green Parasol."

She will not hide. She will be in plain view on the streets mentioned—at the time appointed.

Plan your Sunday outing now!

$100 for Some Reader.

Nothing but an extremely severe, continuous rainstorm, such as we had last Sunday, will prevent her from keeping her appointment.

One hundred dollars awaits some AMERICAN reader. It might just as well be you as your neighbor.

Examine the picture of "The Lady with the Green Parasol" in today's AMERICAN—then be at Revere Beach tomorrow at 2 p. m.

MISSING BOAT PARTY INVENTION OF JOKER

BRAINTREE, July 27.—After an all-night search for three young men and three girls reported lost in a boat in Braintree Bay, Chief of Police Loring of this town early today declared that the report was apparently the work of a practical joker. The report came from the Revere police, who transmitted the message from a "relative" of one of the "missing" ones.

BEEF HIGHER FOR SUNDAY'S DINNER

Advice to the Economical Housewife—Have chicken for dinner tomorrow.

For on practically all grades of beef there has been a two or three cent rise, while the price of poultry has dropped from five to seven cents below last week's price. Sirloin roasts and steaks are now thirty-three cents. Rump steak is forty-two cents. While broilers are thirty cents, and geese twenty-eight. Fruit and vegetables are plentiful and cheap, to round out the meal.

WALTHAM MAN IS STRANGELY MISSING

Friends are today trying to solve the mystery of the disappearance of Arthur Beverly, for two years a member of the Waltham Board of Aldermen. He has a wife and six children living at No. 26 Cherry street, Waltham. He went to see a Boston lawyer Wednesday night and has not been seen since. He is 5 feet 8 inches in height, of ruddy complexion, brown hair and dark mustache.

LODGE ATTACKS FREE SUGAR IDEA

WASHINGTON, D. C., July 27.—Charges that one of the big sugar interests of the country is responsible for legislation tending toward free sugar were made by Senator Lodge today, when he addressed the Senate during the sugar bill debate in opposition to the House measure advocating free sugar.

After tracing the history of the manufacture of beet sugar from the time of Napoleon, the Senator said that today every civilized nation imposes a tax on this article because it is easily collected and does not fall heavily on the consumer.

"The theory of the proponents of free sugar as embodied in the House bill, if they had a theory extending beyond the collection of votes, would appear to have been that if the sugar duty was removed the entire benefit of the removal would come to the consumer and that he would receive his sugar.

"Taking the figures of the bureau of labor as correct, and my own personal investigation made before I knew them confirms the official statistics, we find that if the whole duty on 96 degrees sugar of 1.68 cents per pound is removed each consumer will save 0.90216 cents per year.

"Who then, in the United States is seeking as a matter of personal interest to bring about the results which I have tried to portray?" asked the Senator. "I mean, what are the forces outside of Congress, which are expressing for free sugar or for a heavy reduction in the rates? So far as I have been able to learn, the movement for free sugar, outside of Congress has come from one of three great sugar refineries of the country and from that source alone."

Senator John Sharp Williams presented to the Senate, as soon as the consideration of the sugar schedule was taken up, a minority report in the form of an amendment to the House bill offered as a substitute. Its principal features are the abolition of the differential and the No. 16-Dutch standard color test. The minority amendment attempts to strike a middle course in tariff revision.

PROBE SHOOTING IN EAST BOSTON

The police are today investigating a mysterious East Boston shooting.

Mrs. Rosie Lamonica of No. 6 Liverpool street was awakened early today by a revolver shot. She found her husband, Philip Lamonica, forty-one, with blood flowing from a bullet wound in the neck. A 32-calibre revolver was by his side in the bed.

The sound of the shot was heard by the policeman on the beat, who called an ambulance and Lamonica was taken to the East Boston Relief Hospital, where his name was placed on the dangerous list.

When questioned, Lamonica, who cannot speak English well, claimed that he had been shot by a man who had formerly roomed in his house. He gave the man's name to the police. The man was taken to the station house and locked up under suspicion. He is Rocco Azziling of No. 103 Maverick street, East Boston. Mrs. Lamonica, however, said that she believed her husband had shot himself.

CAUGHT IN BUILDING, HELD ON SUSPICION

A man giving his name as Peter McDonough, twenty-two, of No. 87 Silver street, South Boston, is held at Station 2 as a suspicious person. After a rough-and-tumble fight through two hallways and down a flight of stairs in the building at No. 15 Cornhill, he was captured by occupants of the building.

SUB-CALIBER WORK FOR CAPE TROOP

Sub-caliber practice was the order of the day for the first battalion, the Cape troop, at Fort Warren today. The companies will also brush up on infantry drill. Next Tuesday Governor Foss will make his first visit.

WILL SOCIETY DANCE 'EM?

An English artist suggests some startling new terpsichorean effects which make the "Bunny Hug" and the "Turkey Trot" seem tame by comparison.

MRS. HOFFMAN AGAIN LEADS MEAT STRIKERS

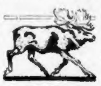
Mrs. Eva Hoffman has returned and resumed charge of the kosher meat strike in Boston after a long rest. She spoke at a meeting in the ward room on Blossom street, West End, where co-operative stores were discussed.

ARREST MOTHER WHO ABANDONED CHILD

Mrs. Elizabeth Fairbairn, thirty-five, of No. 74 Sidney street, Cambridgeport, is under arrest charged with abandoning the baby girl found in the Charles River parkway Wednesday night. The woman admitted the child was hers.

MOOSE PARTY IN CONVENTION

Crowds gathered at Faneuil Hall today for the first State convention of the Bandanna-Bull Moose party. Roosevelt marching clubs, with both red and blue bandannas prominently displayed, gave color and enthusiasm to the gathering.



Ex-Mayor Frederick Fosdick of Fitchburg called the convention to order.

Permanent organization was quickly effected and names of candidates for the eighteen places of delegates to the Chicago convention submitted. In addition eighteen alternates are to be chosen to the August 5 national gathering.

Just prior to the convention it was definitely decided that no State ticket will be placed in the field in Massachusetts with the exception of a ticket of presidential electors.

This will be entirely separate from the regular Republican electoral ticket. No restriction, however, will be placed upon any Roosevelt third party adherent from becoming an independent candidate for Congress, the State Senate or House of Representatives.

Prominent Roosevelt leaders were missed from the Faneuil Hall gathering. Those most prominent at Chicago, with the exception of ex-Mayor Fosdick, were all absent. Neither Arthur Dehon Hill, Matthew Hale or Charles S. Bird were there. All, it was stated, were detained by unavoidable calls out of town.

James P. Magenis, fresh from a conference at Oyster Bay with Colonel Roosevelt, was one of the directing minds of the convention.

The platform adopted was more a simple declaration of principles than a set of party resolutions. It declared the necessity for a new national party to rebuke Republican fraud at the Chicago convention, called for tariff revision, the curbing of the trusts and the necessity of ending the rule of bosses in both the old parties.

The delegates elected to the new Chicago convention will leave Boston Saturday afternoon next and be in Chicago to hear Colonel Roosevelt in the Coliseum strike his keynote for the Bull Moose party.

WILSON FINISHES KEYNOTE SPEECH OF ACCEPTANCE

SEAGIRT, N. J., July 27.—Governor Wilson is back at the "Little White House" today with his speech of acceptance practically completed. The speech is in the form of short-hand notes, written by the Governor himself, who has been an expert stenographer for many years. These notes the Governor will dictate to a relay of stenographers this afternoon. His secretary has arranged to have the matter rapidly typewritten, so that it can be revised by the Governor and placed in the hands of the printer by Monday.

Senator Gore was expected here this afternoon, to discuss further plans for the campaign. Numerous letters have been received here urging Governor Wilson to name Senator Gore as the Western manager of the campaign. The location of the Western office has not been decided upon yet, though many believe Denver will be the final selection.

Senator Gore will take up this question with the Governor. Herman Ridder, whose continuance as treasurer of the Wilson campaign is to be officially announced within a few days, is expected here Monday.

ROOSEVELT HIT BY LA FOLLETTE

MADISON, Wis., July 27.—In a signed editorial in La Follette's Weekly, the Wisconsin Senator attacks Theodore Roosevelt as a one-time ally of reactionaries, and urges progressive Republicans to stay within the ranks of their own party. The editorial says:

"What is known as the progressive movement in American politics is originated within the Republican party. While special interests have been increasing their hold upon the administrative side of the government at Washington progressive Republicans in many stanch Republican States have wrested the control of government from these interests.

"The contest in many of the States was severe and protracted. Defeat was encountered again and again. While Roosevelt was presiding he offered no encouragement to the progressive Republicans who are struggling with the old machine bosses to enact direct primaries and other progressive statutes.

"His influence was openly on the side of the reactionaries.

"His appointees were the most active agents of the opposition.

"In Wisconsin federal office holders were lobby agents for the corporations and spent their time almost wholly at the State Capitol during legislative sessions.

"Until little more than a year ago Roosevelt had not even expressed himself as friendly to what had become—while he was in Africa—so widely known as the progressive Republican movement."

BATHING GIRLS SNAPPED TODAY

Bathing girls—Beware!

Look out for the AMERICAN'S staff photographer at Revere Beach today and Sunday!

Manhattan Beach has long and loudly boasted of its wonderful bathing girls. Atlantic City, Old Point Comfort, and all of the other famous shore resorts are not bashful about proclaiming to the world the charm and loveliness of their sea nymphs.

But what about the typical "New England Bathing Girl?" We don't have to go beyond Revere Beach to find types—thousands of them—of the dearest, sweetest "bathing girls" in the world.

Of course, the AMERICAN can't print thousands of their pictures, but space will allow for a few.

Therefore, girls, if you go bathing at Revere Beach today or Sunday, your picture is apt to appear in the AMERICAN. A capable young man representing the AMERICAN'S photograph department will "snap" hundreds of pictures of bathing girls at Revere Beach this afternoon and Sunday afternoon. The ones chosen to be the most typical of New England bathing girls will be reproduced in the AMERICAN. The most typical of today's snapshots will be printed in Sunday's AMERICAN and the most typical of Sunday's snapshots will be printed in Monday's AMERICAN.

Each girl whose picture is printed will be given an award of a ten dollar gold piece when called for at the AMERICAN Promotion Department, No. 5 Winthrop square.

So—watch out bathing girls! If you go bathing at Revere this afternoon, look for your picture in Sunday's AMERICAN, or if you go bathing Sunday afternoon, look for your picture in Monday's AMERICAN.

Ten dollars will furnish you with a nice little vacation trip and it's no trouble at all—just look for your picture in Sunday's and Monday's AMERICAN.

DENVER EDITOR GETS SENTENCED TO JAIL

DENVER, July 27.—On charges brought by William G. Evans, president of the Denver Tramway Company, Judge Shattuck has adjudged Frederick G. Bonfils, one of the owners of the Denver Post, in contempt of court and sentenced him to imprisonment for sixty days. A fine of $5,000 was also imposed. Bonfils at once gave notice of appeal. H. H. Tammen, Bonfils' partner, left for Honolulu the day warrants were issued for himself and Bonfils.

The Elevated Strike Is Over

The Men Have Gained an Important Victory, Yet the Company Has Lost No Essential Right and Has Not Retreated from Any Position Which It Ever Ought to Have Taken

The Boston Elevated strike is over.

The Elevated Railway has submitted to the force of public opinion and granted the reasonable demands of its employes.

The men have GAINED AN IMPORTANT VICTORY, yet the Elevated Company has LOST NO ESSENTIAL RIGHT and has not retreated from any position which it ever ought to have taken.

The position of the Elevated was impossible from the beginning. The issue, however much the Elevated sought to conceal it, was really the right of the men to organize into a protective trade union. They were proceeding quietly to organize when their activity was discovered and wholesale discharges were made by the Elevated. The men had no other recourse than to strike at once.

THE ELEVATED IN A CONTEST UPON SUCH AN ISSUE, IN TIMES LIKE THESE, WAS FOREDOOMED TO DEFEAT.

The Elevated was not without good advice with respect to its attitude in this situation. On June 4 the AMERICAN reviewed some recent strike history in other cities, and pointed out the terrible cost of such struggles to the public and the defeat in each case of the railway company, quoting an official of the Philadelphia Street Railway Company, who said that NO STREET CAR COMPANY EVER ENTIRELY WON A STRIKE WITH ITS MEN.

The AMERICAN urged the management of the Elevated to bear these facts in mind and to compromise with its men.

On June 12 the AMERICAN recommended that the strike be settled voluntarily, or that the Legislature compel the arbitration to which the Elevated management was refusing to submit.

On July 9 the AMERICAN told the Elevated management that they should settle this strike by granting the reasonable demands of the men. The AMERICAN said: "The men only ask the right to deal with the stockholders, just as the stockholders deal with them. They want a charter as the stockholders have a charter, and they want an Executive Committee as the stockholders have a Board of Directors. Union on both sides gives a balance of power which in the long run will make for the safety of our institutions."

On July 24 the AMERICAN publicly appealed from the active management of the Elevated to its real masters, the powers behind the throne.

But the obstinacy of the Elevated might have been worse. It might have stood upon its technical legal rights until the public was obliged to use a stronger remedy than mere advice. Other railroad managements in other cities have tried it out to the bitter end and convulsed their communities.

The Elevated may perhaps say that when public opinion had clearly expressed itself through the action of the State Board of Arbitration and Conciliation and the official intervention of Governor Foss and Mayor Fitzgerald, it yielded as promptly as the adjustment of the details of the compromise could be arranged.

If the Elevated was really waiting for a clear expression of public opinion and submitted when it came, it is entitled to credit in that respect, although the AMERICAN feels that its management ought to have known in advance what public opinion would be on such an issue as was raised by this strike.

THE BOARD OF CONCILIATION AND ARBITRATION SHOULD NOT BE FORGOTTEN IN THE PUBLIC SATISFACTION at the ending of hostilities which threatened to become widened by the inauguration of a general strike. The gentlemen composing this board have done their duty to the honor of themselves and to the advantage of the City and the Commonwealth. Their service in this situation should not be soon forgotten. The course of events has vindicated the judgment of Mayor Fitzgerald, as the AMERICAN said that it would.

By preserving a course of official neutrality, reserving an OFFICIAL espousal of the employes' cause until the State Board of Arbitration and Conciliation had reported, he made his first official act in their behalf much more effective than if he had become their noisy partisan, at once divesting himself of the influence of his office and bringing to the cause of the employes only his personal influence.

GOVERNOR FOSS HAS TREATED THE ELEVATED WHEN IT WAS WRONG AS HE TREATED THE NEW HAVEN RAILROAD LAST YEAR WHEN IT WAS WRONG, WITH A FIRM HAND.

District Attorney Pelletier greatly aided the men by his impartial attempt to enforce the law. He also contributed to the public good by the courageous criticism of the anarchy-breeding injustice of some of the inferior courts during this strike. Not only were the courts too outrageously severe in some cases in punishing the alleged illegalities of the strikers, but Mr. Pelletier failed to point out—what was the real feature of the action of these courts—namely, that strike-breakers guilty of the same acts were either not punished at all or punished so lightly as to show up the too severe punishment of the strikers by the contrast.

Mr. Byrnes Is Wrong; the New Haven Did Promise to Electrify the Boston & Providence

In an exclusive statement in the corporation-owned Herald, Vice-President Byrnes of the New Haven denies the truth of the AMERICAN'S assertion that the New Haven has promised to electrify the Boston & Providence Railroad.

Unless the New Haven has resurrected its old, peculiar idea of what constitutes a promise, which we had hoped was buried deep under the New Haven's recent experience with public opinion in Massachusetts, Mr. Byrnes is wrong.

THE NEW HAVEN DID PROMISE TO ELECTRIFY THE BOSTON & PROVIDENCE.

When it was planning to get legal sanction for its control of the Boston & Maine it prevailed upon the Commission of Commerce and Industry to recommend that the Legislature legalize this control. Among the reasons given for the recommendation, the most important was the agreement of the New Haven to electrify its system in the Metropolitan district.

Was this a promise or was it something else not yet having a name in any of our unabridged dictionaries?

But we will let the dead past bury itself—we notice Mr. Byrnes' denial merely for the sake of accuracy. The AMERICAN does not want the New Haven to do the impossible. It cannot go faster than the law permits, and if it is doing its best to hasten the great improvement, that is all we ask.

⁘ The Bungalow ⁘

By MINNA IRVING

THE ants are in the butter dish, the flies are in the cream,
The only water we can get is carried from the stream;
The farmers will not sell their eggs, they say they salt them down,
And all their fruit and vegetables they send away to town.
The planks beneath our rugs are full of cracks, both deep and wide,
And snails, and slugs, and crawling bugs come creeping up inside.
I found a caterpillar once encamped upon my toe,
But that is what you must expect when in a bungalow.

We cannot sit upon the porch, a hornet's nest is there,
At every sound they all come out with fierce and angry air;
The shingled roof is leaky, too, you wake and find the bed
Is soaking from the shower-bath in action overhead.
My face and arms are all tattooed with raw mosquito bites,
And concerts by the owls and frogs make horrible the nights;
But when we write to city friends we say: "Why don't you go
And buy an acre in the woods and build a bungalow?"

Seen on the Beaches

By CHESTER FIRKINS

WHEN the mind is heavy with bearing
The "doom" of the "dying race,"
And the heart is weary of fearing
The woes that the wise men trace;
When you're tired of all that teaches
The "ruin" our sons shall see,
Come down to the city beaches
And view those sons with me!

When you've given your last compassion
To the women that live today,
"Dying as slaves to Fashion
And leading the world astray";
When you've sanctioned the last opinion
Of their puny forms unfree,
Come out to the Surf's dominion
And look at the nymphs of the Sea.

You'll face but a new "subpoena,"
For your critics are also here—
Cliff House or Catalina,
Wilson or old Revere—
Shocked at the "calisthenics,"
Shamed by the undressed sea,
Talking about "eugenics"—
But look at our Youth with ME!

Goddess and brown-hued Titan!
Tall and mighty and fair,
Down on the sands at Brighton,
In the bite of the nipping air—
These—in their strong-limbed glory—
These are the sons for me,
And the silver side of the story
Of the race that is yet to be.

LETTERS FROM AMERICAN READERS

THE PERIL OF DOGS

Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

Dear Sir—Your various articles on the necessity of destroying flies are doing lots of good. Could you devote the same energies to the elimination of dog dangers? There are laws to protect us from dogs and their bites, and I feel confident that if you will use the power of your paper to their enforcement you will save many of us from torture and death. If you will consult the recent records of attacks made by dogs, and the results of their attacks, you will, no doubt, pick up this question with as much vigor as you are using in the fly question. All your effort will be a blessing to humanity.

Governor Foss Lets in the Light of Publicity Upon Some Most Important Financial and Political Secrets

The Greatest Newspaper Article Ever Written by a Governor of Massachusetts, and Printed in Tomorrow's SUNDAY AMERICAN, Will Create the Sensation of the Year

GOVERNOR EUGENE N. FOSS, Governor of Massachusetts, is editor of tomorrow's Sunday AMERICAN.

He has written for publication in tomorrow's issue the greatest newspaper article ever issued by a Governor of the State.

He takes the public into his confidence and lets in the light of publicity upon several financial and political secrets which have been a source of wonderment of Massachusetts people for a number of years.

He tells you some things about the methods of the New Haven road and its wide political influence, which will make the voters of Massachusetts ponder carefully before they mark their ballots next Fall.

He tells of the successful efforts of the Boston Elevated to hamper and delay the improvement and advancement of the city of Boston.

His editorial, occupying three full pages of tomorrow's Sunday AMERICAN, is the political and newspaper sensation of the year.

In addition to writing his editorial, Governor Foss will be in the AMERICAN office on Saturday night and will take an active hand in editing the Sunday paper. He will comment editorially on the leading news stories of the day, and generally supervise the getting out of New England's Greatest Sunday newspaper.

* * *

Turning from the more serious side to some of the entertaining features which have been prepared for Sunday's paper, there is a story about Newport, which will prove most interesting reading.

Mrs. O. H. P. Belmont has been interviewed by Miss Elizabeth Elliott, and what Mrs. Belmont has to say about the fashionable Summer resort and the goings-on down there is certainly unusual.

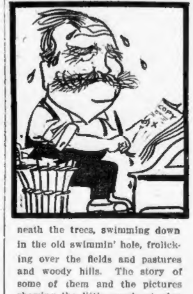
Things have changed in Newport, says Mrs. Belmont, and then she goes on to show HOW they have changed. She explains "What's the matter with Newport." You'll be interested.

* * *

When you linger over the steamed clams down by the sea, and wish they might continue right through two or three courses, did you ever stop to consider the clam as a subject for scientific inspection. The clam is one of the most important Summer guests down at Woods Hole, where a lot of girls are engaged in studying his ways and inclinations. They have made some interesting discoveries. They have pursued the elusive clam to his lair and captured him—and the pictures in Sunday's AMERICAN show them in the act. Why, some of the things those girls say about clams are unbelievable. You ought to read the story.

* * *

Suppose you were a CITY kid and had never been in the country, and your idea of the wilderness was Boston Common. Wouldn't you be about "tickled to death" if someone should say "Come out in the country for a two weeks' vacation and get fat on real milk and hooked by real cows, and fish for real fish," and all that sort of thing. Well, some thirty odd Boston churches are saying just that to two or three thousand little youngsters this year. The boys and girls have been sent all over New England to enjoy such vacations as they never had before. Farmhouses have been purchased in dozens of localities and the little folks are right this minute playing around beneath the trees, swimming down in the old swimmin' hole, frolicking over the fields and pastures and woody hills. The story of some of them and the pictures showing the little people at play which will be printed in Sunday's AMERICAN will make YOU feel like digging down for a little contribution to the funds that make such things possible.



* * *

Boston at the present minute is much concerned about her schools. A new superintendent is coming in soon to shake things up and put the public schools of Boston far in advance of anything else in the country. Of course, Industrial Education will be the keynote of the most vital change. Do you know what this will mean to YOUR boy and girl? Do you know that instead of studying Latin and Greek and the like, which they will never be able to use, they may be taught practical trades? Read the article in Sunday's AMERICAN telling you how you can give your children a more practical and helpful education than was offered YOU when YOU went to school.

* * *

Mr. Frederick Johns, the Sunday AMERICAN'S music critic, has interviewed the great DeBussy. He is the first American to interview the noted composer.

* * *

In a suburb of Boston lives the most famous woman poultry raiser in the country. She has made poultry PAY. She has acted as judge at many poultry exhibits and is an expert in her line. She tells the readers of Sunday's AMERICAN how to succeed with hens. If you have ever been tempted to "raise chickens" be sure to read this article.

* * *

The GIRL WITH THE GREEN PARASOL, who had such unpleasant weather last Sunday that it was necessary to postpone her trip to Revere, will be there this Sunday if the weather is at all clear. There's $100 in gold waiting for whoever finds her, you know, and all you have to do to get the hundred is have a SUNDAY AMERICAN in your hand when you ask her if she is the girl.

There's another prize beauty contest announced in the Magazine section of the AMERICAN.

This time there is a theatrical engagement for the Most Beautiful Woman in America, at $250 a week. The AMERICAN is trying find the most beautiful woman in New England. WHO IS SHE?
